LATEST INTELLIGENCE

By Telegraph to the New-York Daily Times

IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON.

Probable Dismissal of Messrs. Soule and Mason.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 27.

Mr. PIATT, Secretary of Legation at Paris, arrived in town to-day, bringing dispatches which, whatever rumor is entirely at fault, will prove a text for much talk in Washington and out. Their contents, at least, are understood to be interesting and highly important.

Our Secretary of State is not well pleased with the behavior of our Ministers to Spain and France. Both Mr. SOULE and Mr. MASON he holds to have recklessly committed our Government in that awkward affair—the interference with the movements of Mr. SOULE by France. There is reason to suspect, indeed, that our Secretary will not be at liberty to digest at his leisure, and quietly, his own impressions on the subject. For, Mr. MASON is very likely to be dismissed from the French Court, while Mr. SOULE is almost certain to be dismissed from Madrid. Both have anticipated dismissal on the part of our Government, and have written home with that reference. Their conclusion cannot be recented, as we have repeatedly recognized the right of a Government to dismiss intercourse with a Minister who is offensive to it. Mr. PIATT's dispatches probably have reference to this matter. s.

The President's Message—Increase of the Army and Navy—The Nicaragua and Panama Steamship Lines—The Rising in Cuba.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Nov. 26, 1854.

Among the recommendations to be made to Congress by the President, in his forthcoming Message, will be one for a decided increase of the Army and Navy of the United States. The necessity of such action is now more than ever apparent. Secretary DAVIS will probably urge his demand of last year for three new regiments, but the President may be expected to ask for four, all of mounted men. Even this increase will be quite inadequate to the pressing necessities of the service; for if too much is asked for, the danger is that all will fail. It is to be hoped an increase of pay to the officers will also be ordered. The present pay is disgraceefully small.

Mr. DAVIS is well satisfied that the six new regiments ordered by Congress at its last session were a mistake, only, for the American Navy as it should be. He will present, in the strongest light, the imminent necessity for a very large increase in this branch of the service, and not improbably urge the immediate construction of at least a dozen additional steamers of the first class. If Congress is wise, both these measures will be adopted, and our Army and Navy then be made big enough at least to be noticed among the armaments of great nations.

Nothing has been received here yet, throwing the least light upon the fate of the sloop-of-war Albany. It cannot be concealed that there is but slight hope of her safety, or of the safety of her officers and crew. She was a miserable old tub, miserably unfit for service, and yet necessarily sent to sea because the niggardliness or neglect of Congress had failed to provide anything better. If the destruction of one or two of our cutnouts from bombardment by an enemy would have the effect of awakening the national representatives to a sense of their duty in providing for the public defence, we might feel much consolation for the loss; but the sacrifice of hundreds of human lives is too dear a price to pay for a lesson which shall teach the folly of forcing upon the Naval service such material as was the Albany.

Efforts have been made to effect a harmony of interests between the Nicaragua and Panama steamship lines to California, with a view to securing the weekly mail service to and from the Pacific without additional aid to the Department. The effort, however, has failed, and we may expect, therefore, another storm of strife before Congress, and further efforts to speculate upon the public money, through the medium of the California mail service. I take it, however, that the Nicaragua people will find it a more difficult matter than they anticipated, to get a close mail contract, even with the favorable disposition of the Post-Office Department to aid them. If we are to have any additional California mail service, we must have incorporated into the contract some provision which will operate as a check upon the time in which the service is performed.

Half a dozen different parties are preparing to enter the field against the Collins line, to endeavor to break it down and get monopolies for themselves. Such projects can scarcely succeed. It cannot be possible that Postmaster CAMPBELL will consent to the breaking down of a line which has reflected so much credit upon the American name, and the influence of which, more than all other causes combined, compelled the British Government to make general cession with us. And even if the Postmaster General were so disposed, that Representative in Congress will have a hard check, who can escape, especially at this time, in any such enterprise. But the friends of the Collins Line, or, rather, I should say, Americans who are proud of what that line has accomplished, and who would not be in favor of taking whatever will do most to wipe the scutcheon of shame, and humiliation in prospect the minute they would be prompt to visit with severe condemnation the cowardice or inability to continue in the mission it has thus far so nobly sustained.

Mr. DERIAN, the Spanish Minister, appears somewhat better of the serious injuries received a few days ago by being thrown from his carriage; but his physicians do not yet give his friends any encouragement. Indeed it is quite impossible for them to form any decided opinion as to the result. He has recovered consciousness so far as to be sensible of much pain in his head, and to talk rationally about the business of the Legation; but, strange to say, seems entirely unconscious of his own condition, or of the accident that has befallen him.

Letters received in this city tend to confirm the rumors vid New-Orleans, of a contemplated rising in Cuba. A day or two will probably give us positive intelligence as to the truth or falsity of the story, which has been told so often, and proved false so often, that one necessarily receives it with caution. It is not believed that any expedition has fitted out, or is fitting out, from any American port, to take part in the struggle; but it is believed that a large number of Americans, and considerable quantities of material of war, purchased in the United States, will go to Cuba whenever the rising occurs, from some point outside the jurisdiction of the United States. I have seen nothing yet to shake my belief that we are to have the Cuban question upon us in the United States ere long,—that we shall acquire the island either by purchase or conquest, or as a consequence of revolution, or by all these influences combined.

The Secretary of the Treasury has decided upon selections of sites for Custom-Houses at New-Haven, Ct.; Burlington, Vt., Oswego, N. Y., Sandusky and Toledo, Ohio, Chicago, Ill., Milwaukee, Wis., and Wheeling, Va. The aggregate prices to be paid for these is $126,000—just about $5,000 more than was recommended to be paid for a site at Chicago alone. I believe the site selected in New-Haven is that offered by Mr. SAMUEL BISHOP at $24,000. s.

Twenty-fourth Anniversary of the Revolution—Interesting Celebration.

The Twenty-fourth Anniversary of the Polish Revolution was celebrated last night in the Chinese Assembly Rooms. In compliance with the invitation of the Committee of the Polish Democratic Society, there was a very large attendance of "all the friends of universal liberty," and the meeting was as enthusiastic as it was respectable. The room was appropriately draped and ornamented for the occasion. On the wall immediately behind the platform was suspended a large painting, emblematic of the temporary success of the struggle for Polish independence in 1830. The Genius of Polish Liberty, yet tied to the stake, has her manacles burst asunder by the Patriots who have rescued her; some offer her chaplets, and others, wrenching the blazing torch from the Russian who was about to apply it to the pile, cleave him to the ground. On one side of the picture hung the banner of the Reds, on the other the Polish standard; still nearer to the front of the platform were erected the Italian tri-color with the motto, "Dio e Popolo;" and at the other end the American Flag, and the banner of the German Glee Club.

Hon. JOHN P. HALE took his seat as President, amid applause.

A number of Vice Presidents were appointed, some of whom took their places on the platform.

Mr. HALE, in rising to address the assemblage, said that was not patriotism which consisted in outward manifestations, but which was in the heart. In the few words he had to address to them, he would speak in a language understood the world over—the language of the heart. The cause which was necessary they had met to celebrate was cherished upon no scanty of their regard, more from the sacred principles which were asserted in it, than from its ultimate results. But from importance had been attached to its results than on a closer examination it would certainly warrant. What at this day could tell how much Americans were indebted for the liberty they enjoyed to those Englishmen who for the assertion of it were condemned to the stake! And who might not see that the progress of liberal sentiment in Europe received its greatest impetus from the Polish Revolution! Independent of its merits, though was the first and indomitable assertion of human progress, and consequently, of human liberty; but it would be a matter hard without foundation to speculate on what might have been the state of the world was so to be moved. He (the speaker) would, for him to the occasion if he did not say that there was another element, without which those were in vain, and that was the supremacy of conscience over Kings and Governments. And no man was fit to take part in the great emancipation of the existing time, who was not prepared to preserve and maintain those principles, constituents of individual excellence and national strength. [Applause.]

There was an episode, Mr. HALE continued, in the ancient history of Athens, that occurred at a time when the very citadel of that great capital was desolated and ruin and desolation brought over her children; but, strange to say, she was not conquered, for there ever remained there, in her city, a portion of their number with their noble purposes, and their hearts were the citadel of their country's liberties. [Applause.] So with Hungary, and Italy, and Poland; their cause was not yet lost; her freedom to those who had faith to see it or courage to labor for it. [Renewed applause.] All was not lost; it was a law of nature to believe that not a particle was ever destroyed; neither would the blood of patriotism nor the sacrifice of souls seem to be destroyed and thrown away, but return again. When BONAPARTE was advancing upon Cairo, and as his army came in sight of the Pyramids, they paused in astonishment before those mighty monuments of ages passed away; BONAPARTE ordering the cannon, the horse, the troops, and, pointing to the pinnacle of the Pyramids, exclaimed, "Soldiers, from the summit of the Pyramids forty centuries look down upon you!" So all the great monuments of liberty that had been raised in the past ages, he (the speaker) would point to, for encouragement. [Loud and enthusiastic applause.]

Mr. MCMULLAN read a series of communications addressed to the Polish Society in relation to the present anniversary. Among them was a letter from the Polish Central Democratic Committee of London, inviting delegates to their meeting that on the 29th November; from Hon. CHAS. SUMNER, Boston; Hon. A. P. CHASE, Ohio; Gen. MORROS, BRADFORD R. WOOD and JOHN JAY, Esqs.

BOSTON, Saturday, Nov. 25, 1854.

To Col. FORNEY—My Dear Sir: It is not in my power to be in New-York on the evening of your proposed meeting. If any word of mine could serve the cause of Polish Liberty, I should feel a pang in not uttering it.

I trust that, at least, the friends of Liberty in Europe will learn that it is impossible to love Liberty by halves, and that he only is truly fit to be free, who also proves his art to others. That he who vindicates Slavery here at home, cannot faithfully and consistently maintain Liberty abroad. Certain efforts in certain quarters bring to mind the exclamation of Dr. JOHNSON: "How is it that we hear the loudest yelps for Liberty among the drivers of negroes?"

Believe me, dear Sir, faithfully yours,

CHARLES SUMNER.

Mr. HALE, in very complimentary terms, introduced as the "Friend of the Oppressed" Hon. HORACE GREELEY, who was received with thunders of applause.

Mr. GREELEY said he was now named by some a Russian because he did not seem to sympathize fully with the Allies in the war in Europe; he did not care about that; he sympathized with no war of dynasties, with no struggle for the exploded assumption of the balance of power. He sympathized only with the struggles of the people against their oppressors. (Loud applause.) Where was the balance of power when Hungary and Italy were crushed? It was not heard of; it never exhibited itself; and therefore he did not now sympathize with it. In the struggle which he saw inevitably coming, and in which the hopes for Poland were renewed, he would sympathize most warmly. (Applause.) America might now to see that to preserve herself she must take part with the people; and NAPOLEON, unprincipled as he was, must see that only through Poland could he end the present war with the Czar to his own credit. He was not at Sebastopol but before the walls of Warsaw that the great battle between the West and the East was to be fought; and till the time that the nations would engage in the great cause of universal liberty—the great cause of the rights of man—they would all wait hopefully.

Mr. MCMULLAN read the address of the Polish Committee, asking for the appointment of a Standing Committee to watch the progress of affairs in Europe, nominating thereof Messrs. L. SZYMANSKI, A. KRZEWSKI, and E. WYSZNIOWSKI.

The report was unanimously adopted.

An "Address of American Citizens and Political Refugees, on the Anniversary of the Polish Revolution, to the European Democracy," was read. We have only space for a few extracts. It starts out as follows:

"It is our duty to inform you that the amount of sympathy likely to be excited in the breasts of American citizens depends, to a great extent, upon the character of the movement. Under 47, as was the case in 1848, the people be contented with the delusive promises of the treacherous royal despots, who conceded to the nations the semblance of constitutions, while they preserved their thrones, and held in their hands the power of corruption and the sword of power; then, truly, will Americans say that it seems to be worse than useless in them to directly or indirectly countenance the fraud.

"Political Refugees of all nations, who, far from your homes and families, drink of the bitter cup of exile in foreign lands, draw tighter the bonds of friendship between each other, regardless of the continental distinctions of birth and language, and bid yourselves in readiness to rush on the first phase of manifestation to that point where duty calls you.

"Kings of Europe! Beyond seas, in whose seas, all Democrats, apply your mighty strength, you can a wave before you all opposition. Let all the others instantly follow the example and their cause that patriotically enters upon the fray. Let all be united under the standard of Republicanism and Humanity. When this banner shall be unfurled against the Czar, then will the Cossack aggressions be checked and the aspirations of Europe may enjoy repose.

Here follow appeals to the Democrats of Poland, Germany, Hungary, Italy, France and England. And finally:

"To you, Americans, we say: Should not with indefatigable determination, should not the Russian Czar, Prince and England, or if France and England lower the pride of Russia, your own country next. Your prosperity, your very existence, depends upon the victory of the PEOPLE, and the establishment of REPUBLICANISM in Europe."

It was adopted unanimously. Mr. W. CHRZOWSKI addressed the meeting in Polish. He was loudly applauded.

Professor F. FORNEY made a brief address in Italian. He passed a high eulogy on Polish bravery and patriotism, referred indignantly to the efforts of monarchs and despots to obstruct the progress and destroy the hopes of liberty everywhere, but affirmed that the time was approaching when the oppressed nationalities of all Europe, Poland, Italy, Prussia, Hungary and Germany would yet cast off the shackles of all despotism, both temporal and spiritual, and gloriously vindicate the supremacy of human liberty and progress.

Professor BOCALERINI, (in Catalonian,) made a lengthy and able address in English. The audience listening somewhat impatient, he retired before closing to give way to Mons. RAIBEWEL, who made a speech in French. His remarks agreed substantially with those of previous speakers. The present occasion, he said, was but a mere one of the great friends of liberty here, but was also celebrated by the great Festival of Freedom, of which the friends of all classes were to participate.

Mr. MOLIULAR expressed his sympathy with the cause of Polish liberty, wherever found, and adhered to the constitutions, to their principles, and to the principles of liberty, repeating in the hope which would inspirations spring from glorious exertions, and finding faith ground in the accomplishment of duty manifestly

Mr. KAUFMAN, the President of the Society, was introduced, and received with warm applause. He hoped the hopes and aims of the meeting would inspire them, not merely during the hours of the hour, to remain a few moments longer. It was said that the Czar was about to restore independence to Poland; but Polish patriots would not regard the act as a boon; Liberty was only precious when it was gained by the sovereign will of the people, not when bestowed. He expressed his sympathy with the Polish soldiers fighting under the Czar, and concluded by affirming his belief that the time of a universal Republic would soon be realized.

Dr. L. SZYMANSKI made a speech in Polish, which was enthusiastically received. He was followed by Signor TAZZOLI, of the Cuban Junta, who addressed the meeting first in English and then more laughingly in Spanish.

Rev. Dr HECKUER made some very interesting remarks in French, winding up with the cheer, "Vive la Republique!"

The Chairman appointed as the remaining members of the Committee asked for by the Polish Committee, the following gentlemen: Hon. Horace Greeley, Hon. W. A. Duer, Rev. Chas. King and John Jay, Esq.

The meeting was dissolved about six.

NEW-YORK BIBLE SOCIETY.

Thirty-first Anniversary—Speeches of Hon. Geo. P. Marsh, &c.

The annual meeting of the New-York Bible Society—Auxiliary to the American Bible Society—took place last evening in Dr. ALEXANDER's Church.

The President of the Society, E. M. KINGSLEY, Esq., took the Chair at 7½.

HENRY MARSHALL, Esq., the Treasurer, presented his report for the past year, which showed a total income of $14,577 80.

WM. ALLEN BUTLER, Esq., the Corresponding Secretary, presented the thirty-first annual report, which stated that the field of labor included the distribution of Bibles from the harbor to the Harlem River, among all classes of the people, to all the hotels and large boarding-houses, and parties lately to emigrants from all parts of the world. It referred to the labors of Mr. ALEXANDER WATSON, the agent of the Society, in terms of commendation, he having visited 10,112 families during the six months he has been engaged, 313 of which refused to receive it. This number of refusals was stated as a decrease of 7 per cent upon the number of refusals in past years. It described the labor as being thoroughly performed, no less than 120 to 130 families being frequently visited in one day. One of the principal questions which the agent has put to him is: "What Bible?" and the objection is that it is not the true version. This is the objection raised among the Catholics, and was the result of erroneous teaching, rather than of positive rejection of revealed truth. Mr. BINGLEMAN, the agent of the Society, who confines his labors to the German and French population, has distributed among them 2,285 copies of the Scriptures. There have also been supplied to new hotels during the year 800; to industrial and Sunday Schools, 1,500; to Prisons and Hospitals, 2,300. The Emigrant Committee have since distributed 3,023 Bibles and 10,776 Testaments to emigrants sailing in this port; also 16,000 in French, German and other foreign languages, distributed among foreign emigrants going to other ports. The total number of Bibles and Testaments, in all languages, distributed to emigrant ships during the past year by the aid of this Society is no less than 23,535, and the aggregate of all the distributions is 56,091 volumes, of which 9,571 were Bibles and 41,320 Testaments.

The Marine Agent of the Society, Mr. PIERSON, has supplied 136 new vessels with Bibles, lettered "For the Cabin Table." Of these 26 were river or coasting steamers, among which were the Yankee Blade, and the San Francisco (since lost,) the Nashville, Cahawba, Georgia, and some others; 121 large vessels bound for the East Indies and the Pacific, have been fitted out with full supplies for their crews and passengers; 2,365 volumes have been supplied for the San Juan and Aspinwall steamers to persons bound to California.

Rev. Dr. HEWITT, of Bridgeport, Conn., then addressed the meeting. After a few introductory remarks, he asked: Are there any ascertained means approaching in efficacy, for the salvation of man, that system of grace which is developed in the Sacred Scriptures? It was well known to all Evangelical Christians that there are not; then what more powerful inducement could they have to multiplying the copies of that invaluable book? Doubtless there were those in that assembly who remember the days when the Bible Society and the Missionary Societies were founded; the enthusiasm of the anniversary meetings; the high hopes expressed and the glorious prospects of the world pictured forth; yet they must see that these hopes and expectations have been realized. This disappointment has either some cause in the solution of the problem of the wide-spread infidelity and depravity which which has not been accomplished. He conceived that all that seems to be needed was to open the door of hope—to raise the reasonable expectations; and, by fostering these hopes and expectations, with prayer and efficient exertions, we may pray and evangelical truth might become extensively known among the children of men. Let them remember that the Bible is of God, and its efficacy is of God. He did not mean the book, the letter, and the paper, but he meant the "spirit that giveth life." This is of God. The word of God is the sword of the spirit. Why, then does it not go forth conquering and to a conquest? Does not follow that there shall be an infallible connection between the word that is read and the person who reads it. If there were such connection whenever the word is read, there would be no infidelity. It seems, therefore, as if with the spirit of God that success must be expected. Everything appertaining to God's grace in the world, possesses a celerity which defies intellectual bounds to see it. Let those who have the spirit of God within them use the word of God and deliver it, and then the Scriptures would become as efficacious as of old, when it was preached with power and with authority. What is there that is placed within our power to make the promulgation and distribution of the Scriptures efficacious? It is the Holy Ghost, and as it is said in that word that the prayers of the "righteous availeth much," so should every one who gives away a Bible, remember that the duty and obedience upon him to use the means which he placed within the reach of every righteous man. Conclude the remarks by exhorting the assembly to greater love and higher faith in prayer, and to a fuller reliance in the distributed word of the Holy Scriptures, as the only means by which the world can be evangelized and the reign of Satan, prince and death, be published among men.

SPEECH BY HON. GEO. P. MARSH.

Hon. GEORGE P. MARSH, of Burlington, Vt., next addressed the meeting on the progress of the Scriptures of the United in the Ottoman Empire. The Christians present in the world, in Italy, the greatest density of population, and the greatest degree of intelligence and all the conveniences of social intercourse, the Christians of the Ottoman Empire, the minority of the population, the Christians of the Ottoman Empire, the minority of the population, the Christians of the Ottoman Empire, the minority of the population

[illegible]

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

QUEBEC, Wednesday, Nov. 22, 1854.

The Scandal, which was beginning to sweep over our Parliamentary proceedings was brought upon us on Monday night, by an affair of honor being brought under the cognizance of the House. [illegible] had been disclosing for some hours a most exclusively dull subject—the financial affairs of the Grand Trunk Railway—and had been discussing the obscurity which actually belonged to the subject, by having a fresh other, to and fro, [illegible] they were agreeably relieved out of the [illegible] in which they had sunk, by a summons from an honorable and gallant member, Major Rennie, to give their attention to a gross breach of privilege which had been committed against one of the members of the House. It appeared that Mr. Cameron, in his capacity of Chairman of an Election Committee, had occasion to investigate a witness, a Quebec advocate of the name of Gemmill, whether he, Gemmill, had signed an affidavit stated to an election petition—whether the fact he had committed a fraud and a forgery. The indication rankled in the mind of the witness, and the result was that he sent a letter to Mr. Cameron, demanding "that satisfaction which one gentleman has a right to expect from another," and accompanying this hope that the honorable gentleman would not shelter himself under his privileges as a member of the Legislature. Mr. Cameron, it is said, is not dedicate in valor, but on the present occasion he did not appreciate the necessity of risking a bullet here on his body in order to heal the wounded gentleman's wounded dignity. He, therefore, [illegible] brought before the House, and the offensive thing produced, the hard writing was examined, and Gemmill was ordered to be taken into the custody of the Sergeant-at-arms. Yesterday he was placed at the bar of the House, and gave a positive expressing his regret that he should have been guilty of a breach of the privileged of the House, and praying to be released from durance vile. Some honorable members thought that this was not sufficient, but that an apology was due also to the honorable member who had been challenged. One honorable gentleman denounced the practice of dueling in strong terms, as an exploded absurdity of barbarous times, and said that he, for one, would always look to the law for the protection of his honor, because if the father of an invitation mortally, he would not be so mad as to think of vindicating it by throwing himself on the point of a dagger, or placing himself before a loaded pistol. The honorable and gallant member who had introduced the subject, Capt. Rennie, spoke in similar terms, and said that if any man should ever have the impertinence to send him a challenge, he should answer himself with handing never to his wife a more pacific sentiment, however, did not seem to find favor with the majority, and the gallant Captain, whose "high sense of honor" seemed to be [illegible] was dismissed without further question.

Almost every other business is set aside by the Legislature, to allow the Government to push through the Clergy Reserve, Seigneurial Tenure and Grand Trunk Railway Bills. In a former communication I explained the position of parties in reference to the secularization of the Clergy Reserves, which is now, and for many years has been, the great question of Upper Canada. A few words only suffice for the Seigneurial Tenure, the ill-sounding appellation of Lower Canada. A more monstrously absurd picture than the Government bill "to do away with the rights of Seigniors and Censitaires in Lower Canada, and to facilitate the redemption thereof," cannot be imagined, passed through any Legislature. The only reason why the whole of Upper Canada is not ringing with denunciations of it, instead of there being only a solitary protest here and there, is that the question is imperfectly understood, in consequence of being enveloped in the unintelligible jargon of feudal times. The original establishment of Lower Canada was made in strict accordance with the feudal system. The Kings of France granted very large tracts of land to the gentlemen of their Court, to facilitate colonization, these Seigniors, as they were termed, receiving the Seigniories, not as absolute proprietors, but under the condition of conveying land to every applicant at a rent of one cent, or a penny, an acre. The Seigniors, in fact, were to be regarded more as Crown Land Agents than anything else, and in consideration for their trouble in settling the country they were to receive this trifling rent, and were invested with certain seigneurial rights—the [illegible] of the actual proprietors of the land, being bound, for example, to take their grain to the Seigniors' mill, and to pay one-twelfth of the value of the land on every transference of the property from one hand to another. As time has passed on the Seigniors have gradually approximated to the position of actual proprietors, and have [illegible] some of much higher amount than the original rents of the great warrantee—in some cases as much as 100 to one. They have also gradually built up a set of rights, and imposed a [illegible] of which they had no title whatever. The establishment of such a system in the middle of the Nineteenth Century, side by side with the enterprise and material progress of Upper Canada and the Northern States, is certainly an impossible barrier to improvement in Lower Canada. The Government, however, [illegible] to do away with the Clergy Reserves, but how do they propose? They propose to cause to reduce all the rents to a [illegible] rent, and that the Province shall pay to the Seigniors the full value of the rent hereafter paid, and [illegible] thereof. The Province is also to pay to the Seigniors the value of his right of Banality, or the exclusive privilege of the Seigniory, and then to give back these privileges to the Censitaires who [illegible] enough to have his grain lying about the mill yard. Thus a Censitaire who has lived for years from last year, with the perfect knowledge that it was burdened with a ground rent of 1 lb. of grain, and knowing that he had no [illegible] the value of his land passing, receive a present of the Seigniory, and have the rent which he currently agreed to pay reduced to the proper [illegible] of 1 lb. of grain, at the expense of the Province. The Seigniors will receive generously in the [illegible] for every right they claim, which is [illegible] much greater than they are entitled to; the Censitaires have burdens imposed which they voluntarily undertook, and the United Province takes Hyde the other, at an expense of a million and a half of dollars! All this the Government have to pay to the commutation of the Seigniors' rights to demand [illegible] to every transference of property, the [illegible] of the land, or his right to resume the property [illegible] on the purchase price, at any time within [illegible] years, by simply giving notice to the Seigniory that he wish the Seigniory will be sitting [illegible] Surely giving such glaring injustice would [illegible] from Upper Canada [illegible] the Government [illegible] by Jill with the Clergy [illegible] and saying—You must take [illegible] Lower Canada, and pay the Seigniors [illegible]

NEW-YORK CITY.

TRIAL FOR DIVORCE.

Case of Frances L. Childs vs. Solomon Childs.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT.

Before the Hon. Judge Emmet.

FIRST DAY.

The case of Frances L. Childs, by Lisnack H. Simpson, Jr., her next friend, vs. Solomon Childs, which was set in the calendar for yesterday, came up for trial.

For the plaintiff, Messrs. John Graham and E. E. Lansingh appeared. Messrs. Ambrose L. Jordan and H. H. Morange represented the defendants.

Mr. Jordan objected to the case going to trial, on the ground that it was not regularly upon the calendar. The Court overruled the objection.

The following gentlemen were then empannelled as Jurors:

1. Elijah Stiles,	7. Samuel Saunders,
2. ——— Ladd,	8. Henry Conklin,
3. Solomon Hopper,	9. Robert S. Hone,
4. Amos W. Brown,	10. Howard S. Loveday,
5. James C. Lurce,	11. Peter W. Tyler, Jr.,
6. Wm. H. Brush,	12. Joseph Souich.

Mr. Graham then proceeded as follows to state the CASE FOR THE PROSECUTION.

If the Court please, Gentlemen of the Jury: This is not an unusual case. It belongs to a class of cases that are rather frequent in their occurrence. It has been said by each of the learned counsel for the defence, that this particular case is an extraordinary one, and unless it is to be made so by the extraordinary conduct of the counsel, I am utterly at a loss to conceive how their wish can be fulfilled. Hitherto their performances have been very extraordinary; but now that the case is to come to trial, and a jury has been empannelled, and it is the duty of the Court to see that the rules of law are conformed to, it is to be supposed that the learned counsel for the defendant will resume the mission of duty, not only to themselves, but to the Court and to you, in conducting this case as it should be, agreeably to the rules of law and the rules of testimony. The plaintiff in this action is Frances L. Childs, and the defendant Solomon Childs. The plaintiff prosecutes through Lisnack H. Simpson, Jr., her brother, as her next friend. The plaintiff, as has been already stated, is the daughter of Mr. Lisnack H. Simpson, a gentleman conducting a large business as a liquor dealer, as I am informed, in Beaver-street. The action is prosecuted for the purpose of obtaining a divorce, and as incident to that purpose, for obtaining the custody of an only child, the issue of the marriage; and also, if the wife should succeed in obtaining a divorce at your hands, for a share of the Court, as a necessary consequence for her support for the rest of her life. That support to be proportionate to the means of the husband. The facts are these: The marriage in this case was solemnized on the 20th March, 1850; at that time the plaintiff was about 19 years of age, the defendant in the neighborhood of 24; and why does the plaintiff not take interest enough in these proceedings to be present himself, after the most and circumstances which has been exhibited in his behalf? It will be for him to furnish some satisfactory explanation to you hereafter. The marriage was solemnized according to the Jewish ceremonies, at the residence of the plaintiff's father, by Rev. J. J. Lyon, a minister of the Jewish persuasion. The cohabitation lasted until October, 1850. At that time the defendant left his wife under circumstances which I shall presently disclose, intending as he avowed to return again in a short time. From that day to this the plaintiff's eyes have never fallen upon him. In the meantime a child has been born, and that child to this day is without the blessing of its father's smile. There is some peculiarity in the manner in which actions of this kind are presented to the cognizance of a jury. Ordinarily issues are raised upon the pleadings, that is when the papers which are prepared upon the one side and upon the other, set forth the allegations of the parties. Peculiarity does the law look upon cases of this description, however, and so desirous is it to disembarrass the jury in the consideration of the delicate issues which may be submitted to them, that the uniform practice of all Courts, as required by law, is to require the sentiments of the certain preliminary issues growing out of the obligations of Court pleadings—framed upon those allegations in the nature of questions to the jury, to which they are to respond. There are seven of these interrogatories. They turn, however, upon two principal facts. The first is whether the plaintiff in this action resided within the jurisdiction of this Court at the time of the commission of the adultery by the husband, and when this bill was presented against him. The second is, whether the plaintiff has been guilty of the specific instance of adultery referred to, or propounded within these specific interrogations. The plaintiff, at the solemnization of this marriage, was unquestionably a resident of this State. She had always lived in this City, and was married in this City. The parties to this action left this City for the State of Ohio, and were absent four or six weeks. In the meantime, with this exception of four or six weeks, I am not informed that the plaintiff has been absent from the jurisdiction of this Court. Ordinarily when the husband and wife live in harmony together, the residence of the husband becomes the residence of the wife. But when differences arise between them in consequence of the indelicacy of either, as in the present case, it becomes the duty of the incoherent party to separate from the other and gain a residence for himself or herself, with the view of separation from the guilty party. We shall show that at the time the offence was committed, the wife was an actual resident of this jurisdiction, and entitled to the benefits of the law which she claims against the husband. But the more important point in whether the defendant was guilty of the adulterous charge against him in the pleadings in this action. In this connection allow me to say that the plaintiff attaches the defendant in his strong hold, on the score of these different adulteries is held in Cincinnati. If she had laid the complaint in this City, or some other than in which her husband or herself actually resided, she might have taken him at a very great disadvantage, and the gentlemen than might have shown some propriety in the zeal and austerity of resistance which all the efforts to bring this case to trial have met with. But when you consider that this action was commenced in March, 1853, since which a period of nearly two years has elapsed, during which time the defendant has had the opportunity to vindicate his innocence beyond all peradventure, and to his bar had every facility to establish his innocence, for the wife has had to establish his guilt, it seems to me it comes with an ill grace when we heard the lion in his den, that the counsel should say that they are forced into a trial by the technical pressure of the plaintiff. The principal testimony upon which you will be called upon to settle the issue, is that which was literally placed in the hands of this defendant fifteen months since. It was testimony preserved in the first place by the examination of one of the principal witnesses in the City of New-York, by order of the Court, in view of her intended departure beyond the jurisdiction, so that she could not be present at the trial in this occasion. The testimony of the other principal witnesses, the number, has been obtained through the means of a commission in the city of Cincinnati. The testimony of the first principal witness, sustains the charge of infidelity against the husband. The witness was examined in July, 1853, and the others in August following, and the facts contained in that testimony have been known not only to the defendant himself, but to his counsel, ever since. The first witness whose deposition was taken de bene esse, is that of a woman named "Belle Forrest," who between 1850 and 1853, kept a house of prostitution in Cincinnati, in a place called "Water-row," between Fourth and Fifth-streets. Subsequent to that, she removed to this City, and kept a house of a similar character in Crosby-street. It was here that her testimony was secured, in view of her departure from the State. We will show by this witness, that during 1851, the defendant in this case had illicit intercourse with two females, inmates of her house, whose names will be disclosed in the testimony, and particularly that in the months of September and October, 1851, between a girl named Emily Moore and defendant, a great intimacy did exist, and had existed for a considerable time. This was after this defendant had absented himself from this City and his wife, for the alleged pretence of going to Cincinnati to attend to his business, under the promise of returning in two or three weeks. I am aware that the senior counsel's armory possesses every species of weapon, and we expect that all of his eloquence, sarcasm and vituperation will be brought to bear against this witness, who, he will urge, stands self-convicted, she being a queen of infamous notoriety. But we think that the entire frankness of the woman is a sufficient guarantee of the honesty of her testimony. But we do not rely alone upon that witness for her evidence is justified by that of Mr. Deiss, a police officer of Cincinnati, who at the time was attached to the Criminal Courts of that city. He will testify to the actual presence of this defendant in the house of the witness "Belle Forrest." We will show that from the stand a witness heretofore called to the stand, but above suspicion, who actually saw the defendant in Miss Forrests' house about the time the adulteries were alleged to have been committed. We shall be able to show also that about the same time these adulteries were being committed at Miss Forrest's, this husband was regaling himself in the establishment of a Miss or Mrs. Crane. All of this testimony, gentlemen, will be strengthened by a development of the circumstances under which this defendant separated from his wife, that he has a branch house of Child & Brothers in Cincinnati, that, although he pretends that he has always lived in Cincinnati, he has been almost continually in New-York for several or eight years prior to the marriage; that after marriage he spoke often of his intention to buy a house here to set up his young wife in house-keeping; that since his separation he has resented almost exclusively in Cincinnati except when he has paid clandestine visits to this City. We shall urge from all the facts what so far as he was concerned, there was an utter destruction of love and attachment to his wife, and we shall show by the answer to which he has sworn that he is not willing to admit that he is the father of the child that was born in the month of June after their separation. We will be able to strengthen our case in relation to the original intention of the defendant to separate himself by a variety of circumstances—by the admission that since their marriage he has only given to his wife clothing to the amount of $70, and money to the amount of $950, a sum which is much less than he possessed the ability to furnish. We shall be able to show that he has endeavored to terminate the action in this issue by the commencement of a suit for a divorce in Ohio, and was endeavoring to anticipate the decision of this court, and though the counsel may urge that he may be still innocent not to have that suit tried until this is decided, yet there was no means by which that agreement on his part can be interpreted, but to arrest the final hearing of the case was being tried in the Ohio Courts.

Mr. Graham then called to the stand Solomon L. Simpson, Jr., a brother of the plaintiff, to testify to the fact of the inability of the plaintiff to obtain the presence of the witnesses whose written testimony he was about to exhibit to the Jury.

Mr. Lansingh, for the plaintiff, then read a deposition from Belle Forrest.

The Court then adjourned to this morning at 10 o'clock.

ASYLUM FOR INEBRIATES.

Report of the Directors and Appeal to the Public.

We, the undersigned, appointed by the Legislature of the State of New-York to organize an institution to be known as "THE UNITED STATES INEBRIATE ASYLUM, and to act as Commissioners to receive subscriptions to the capital stock of said Asylum," do herewith submit to the public the following statement:

The object of this institution is to provide an asylum for the poor and destitute inebriate, where his physical and moral condition will be alike the care of the physician and the philanthropist, and where his labor may be rendered productive and of service to his family. With the asylum there will be connected work shops, in which each patient, as soon as his condition will permit, will be regularly employed—thus making the asylum a self-supporting institution. It will be seen that the community will thus be relieved of the burden of maintaining inebriates in nuisanceous and prisons; who will be separated from the society of those incarcerated for public crimes, and placed where their inebriety will be treated as a disease, and where no efforts will be wanting to produce in them a thorough reformation; and where an income from their labor will be secured to their families, who otherwise would be left to penury and suffering. To carry out successfully the great aim of the Institution $50,000 must be raised; this being the amount of Capital Stock required by the charter. This amount, which can be increased when necessary, is divided into shares of $10 each. Any person wishing to subscribe to the Capital Stock, can send his name with the amount he will take to any one of the Directors.

We think it judicious to lease a building or buildings (until suitable edifices can be erected) for the purpose of entering at once, or as soon as practicable, upon the work for which the charter was granted. In accordance with a provision in the act of incorporation, there will be a report on the third Wednesday of January in each year, of the proceedings, expenditures, income and condition of the Asylum, verified by the affidavits of the President and Treasurer, which report must be filed in the office of the Secretary of State.

In regard to the necessity of an institution of this character, we cite no less authority than Dr. BENJAMIN RUSH:

"To the account of physical remedies," he says, "I add one more, viz.: The establishment of a hospital in every city and town in the United States for the exclusive purpose of hard drinkers. They are as much the objects of public humanity and charity as mad people. They are indeed more hurtful to society than most of the deranged patients of a common hospital would be if they were set at liberty."

We are happy in giving assurance that this enterprise meets with the approbation and encouragement of many of the most intelligent and philanthropic members of the community. The directors put forth this brief statement of their object and plan of operations with the expectation of meeting a quick and cordial response from the benevolent of this and other sections of the country. The call for sympathy and material aid in laying a permanent basis of an institution that promises much for the recovery and salvation of a large number of the human brotherhood, we are confident will not be unheeded.

This institution is not designed to conflict with any other method for recovering the inebriate. There is nothing, we believe, similar to it in this or in any other country. Thousands will look to it for help, and help they should and must have. That which was worth creating is worth preserving. The benevolent Father puts it in our power to save those who are ready to perish. To rescue a fellow-being from physical and spiritual thraldom is worthy of the exercise of the highest talent and of the purest love. To redeem from ruin is greater than to create. To turn one from vice to purity, from darkness to light, from death to life, to make him the possessor of a free, enlarged and beatified existence, is a divine mission. Everywhere goes up the wail of wrecked humanity, of prostrate and suffering brothers. From every side comes the cry for help. They are the true workers who respond to this cry. They are enriched in giving and blessed in blessing.

Fellow-citizens, Fathers, Brothers and Sisters! Give us your aid in this branch of beneficence, and the blessing of multitudes will be your reward.

Board of County Canvassers.

The Board of County Canvassers met yesterday, and the Supervisor of the Twenty-first Ward proceeded to submit his returns.

Certain blanks appeared in the printed forms of the returns from the Second District, which the Supervisor, (MOTT,) was directed to have filled up. No numerical discrepancies were detected. When the complete returns had been presented, a motion was made for adjournment, which was seconded. As the Ayes and Noes cannot be called for in this Board, the Supervisors in favor of adjournment were ordered to rise. Two stood up. Those against the motion counted but two, likewise. The Supervisor of the Twenty-first refused to vote, and the President declared the motion lost.

The Supervisor of the Eleventh Ward presented the returns for the same.

In both returns for the Second District, certain votes for one of the candidates for the Mayoralty were given under the name Ferdinand Wood. They were ordered to be sent back for correction, should it be found that clerical error existed.

On motion of the Supervisor of the Twenty-second Ward, the Board adjourned until this morning.

Meeting of the Prison Association.

The Executive Committee of the Prison Association held a meeting last evening at Clinton Hall. The Financial Agent reported his collections for the month, with a donation of two parcels of men's garments.

The Agent of the Detention and Discharged Convict Committee submitted his Diary, by which it appeared that many persons have been aided; as follows: Situations and employment for discharged convicts from Sing Sing, 4; places and work for discharged persons from Blackwell's Island, 9; pecuniary assistance, 27; clothing, 16; persons discharged from City Prisons and Blackwell's Island, on recommendation of the Committee, 29; complaints and charges carefully investigated, 127,—many of which were, on advice, abandoned. Literal extracts were read from the Agent's Diary, showing the nature of the labors accomplished. Among the narrations were these:

"E. F., a discharged convict from Sing Sing, calls at the office and says he was convicted of burglary and sentenced for ten years. The crime I did not commit. After spending five years there, a gentleman of this City interested himself in my behalf, and I obtained my liberty. Prisoner was employed while in prison in the hat-shop, and by working over-time made $25 92; extra charges amounted to $9 81—balance, $16 11. Coffee was charged to him at 50 cents per lb.; sugar, 15 cents, &c."

Another man was arrested for stealing a watch, and "sent up." His luggage was searched, and $200 to $300 worth of clothing, keepsakes, &c., were taken in charge by the Police—none of which he was able to recover when released.

Ladies' Memorial to Bishop Wainwright.

A number of ladies, residents in the western side of this city, deeply interested in securing the election of an Episcopal Free Church in their neighborhood, propose to hold a fair in the Chinese Assembly Rooms during the week before Christmas. The proceeds of the Fair will be given for that purpose to the Treasurer of "The Ladies' Memorial of Bishop WAINWRIGHT." Donations of work from ladies, or of books, toys, or fancy articles, &c., from any source, are earnestly solicited and may be sent to Mrs. CLINTON, No. 219 West Fourteenth-street.

MORE FIRES.

Heavy Damage to a Front-street Warehouse—Fire in Upholstery Establishment.

Yesterday morning near 6 o'clock, fire was discovered in a large warehouse at No. 79 Front-street. The flames were first discovered in the second story of the building, and owing to a stiff breeze blowing at the time, they spread furiously, and threatened a total loss of the premises. The firemen were soon at work, and in the course of half an hour deadened the fire. The fire is supposed to have originated from the ignition of a large case of lucifer matches.

The store was occupied by the following merchants: Messrs. PECK & LYMAN; the first-floor by REMINGTON & Co., WILLIAM EVANS, tea broker, and MCINTIRE & CRUIN; the third floor by the Union Mills Company. Messrs. WRIGHT, BRIGGS & Co., W. W. BREWSTER, and JOSEPH MOSBY, cotton and commission brokers, had an office on the second floor, but sustained no loss.

The following is a list of the losses, as near as our reporter could obtain them:

Loss on the warehouse estimated at $1,200; insurance not ascertained.

Messrs. REMINGTON & Co., pickle and preserve dealers, sustained a loss of $1,000 to their stock; they are insured in the Citizens' Insurance Company.

W. EVANS, tea broker, loss about $1,000; insured for $3,500 in the Citizens' Insurance Company.

MCINTIRE & CRUIN, loss $100; no insurance.

PECK & LYMAN, loss $3,000; covered by insurance.

WRIGHT, BRIGGS & Co., loss about $2,000; no insurance.

Messrs. PECK & LYMAN are insured for $15,000, in the following companies: Knickerbocker, $5,000; City, $5,000; Union Mutual Company, $5,000.

Yesterday about 8 o'clock A. M., flames were seen issuing from the windows of the upholstering and furnishing store occupied by Mr. WILLIAM BANKS, on the corner of Chatham and Mulberry-street. The firemen were soon on the ground and the fire was extinguished without much injury being done. A defect in one of the flues is supposed to have been the cause of the conflagration, the fire having been first observed in the upper story of the premises. The damage sustained was chiefly by water. Mr. BANKS' loss, which is about $500, is fully covered by insurance.

Afraid of its Shadow—Mutilated Books.

Mr. NORTON, bookseller, yesterday showed us a specimen of book-mutilating ingenuity which is refreshing. It is a copy of the TAUCHNITZ (Leipzig) edition of the Dittons, by LEVER, vol. iv! On pages 65 and 160, paragraphs of the story are suppressed. How they came to be so in the interesting part. The book appears to have been one of a lot which was shipped to St. Petersburg, passed through the hands of the Russian Censor as it crossed the frontier; afterward returned to the German publisher, and then re-shipped to New-York. The binder in this City detected the mutilation, and awaited instructions.

We have taken the trouble to restore the suppressed passages. Here they are. There is nothing very frightful in them:

"Away with such trifling as this," said D'ESMONDE, passionately, "and do not try to impose on me by these courteous generalities that dance Cabinets. Russia speaks to Western Europe, but by her gold. The "Rouble' can come where the 'Cossack' cannot. There are men with these armies that comprehend no other argument—whose swords have their price. Our treasuries are exhausted; the sacred vessels of our altars—the golden ornaments of our shrines—are gone. You alone can aid us at this moment. It is no barren generosity, Prince! You are combating your Poles more cheaply beside the Po and the Adige than on the banks of the Vistula! You are doing more! You are breaking up those ancient alliances of Europe whose existence excluded you from Continental power! You are buying your freedom to sit down among the rulers of the Old World, and accustoming the nations of the West to the voice of the Boyard in their Councils. And, greatest of all, you are crushing into annihilation that spirit of revolt that now rages like a pestilence; but why do I speak of those things to one like you? You know full well the terms of the compact. Your own handwriting has confessed it." D'Esmonde and the Russian.

Lady Hester to Dr. Greenwell.

"She'll tell me all herself, and everything about Russia. I want to hear about the Knout, and the Malachite, and the queer habit of gambling before dinner is announced. I'm sure I should like St. Petersburg. And the brother, what is he like?"

The City Teachers' Association.

This Society held its regular Monthly meeting on Saturday evening, the President, J. H. FANNING, in the Chair. Mr. JAMES N. MCELLIGOTT read a paper on "Extemporaneous Speaking." Mr. S. JENNER offered a resolution having reference to the propriety of the Association memorializing the State Legislature for "An act legalizing the Teachers' Profession." After being amended so as to read "An act for Incorporating County Teachers' Associations, with power to license teachers," it was specially set apart for discussion at the next regular meeting.

Mr. HAZELTINE, Principal of Ward School No. 13, called the attention of the meeting to "Document No. 38" of the Board of Education, recently adopted by that body, and in which a course of studies was assigned for the Public Schools of the City. Many teachers consider such "course" as inapplicable to the present circumstances of our schools. In view of this fact, he moved its reference to a Special Committee. The following gentlemen were appointed: Messrs. Hazeltine, Avery and Partridge. The subject for the evening's discussion was, "The best methods of securing proper Physical Exercise for our Schools, bearing in mind the limited space for play-ground."

Temperance Meeting Up-Town.

The City from its centre to the outskirts on either side, and from the Battery to Yorkville, has now nearly completed its Temperance organizations. A few weeks previous to the Election, several zealous advocates of this reform established a series of weekly temperance meetings in Union Hall, in Broadway, at Thirty-fifth street, about the middle of the Twentieth and Twenty-first Wards. The organization is yet in its infancy, and meets with very poor encouragement. The meetings are enlivened with music, and the band of the Blind Asylum is engaged on these occasions. Last evening the regular meeting was held, and about fifty persons were present. Mr. SAMUEL STEWART presided, and addresses were delivered by Mr. MATCHELL and others.

The Harlem Railroad Accident.

Last evening one of the victims of the recent accident on the Harlem Railroad, near Fifty-seventh-street, died at the New-York Hospital. The cause of death will be investigated this morning at 11 o'clock, before Coroner GAMBLE, at the Hospital.

Taxes Paid.

Over one hundred thousand dollars was received for taxes yesterday, by HARVEY HARE, Receiver of Taxes. The time allowed for tax-payers to cancel their bills at this office terminates on Thursday next.

Lecture on the "Revolutionist."

Mr. PHINEAS HIGLEY commences his Course of Lectures on the life of "Napoleon the Revolutionist and Louis Napoleon" to-morrow evening at Clinton Hall. A residence in Paris during the five years in which the purchase of its present title of Emperor was consummated, has enabled the lecturer to advantageously form an original appreciation of his personal character, philosophy and political projects.

Mr. T. B. ALMONT, Esq., left by the Hermann on his personal business, and to confer with our Minister Legations at London and Brussels.

Clerk of Washington Market.

We understand that Mr. ENGINE, the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps place, will choose MATTHEW D. CHASE, Esq., to fill the office of Clerk of Washington Market. Mr. CHASE was formerly Deputy Sheriff.

Change of Officers in the Tax Office.

The Deputy Receiver of Taxes, WILLIAM A. DARLING, Esq., has resigned that important position to take the office of President of the Third-avenue Railroad. Mr. DARLING has been connected with the Tax Office since the appointment of the present Receiver, HARVEY HARE, Esq. We understand that Mr. JOHN HOXE, the First Clerk, will be the successor of Mr. DARLING, as Mayor WESTERVELT will send his name to the Board of Aldermen at their first meeting in December.

The Police Commissioners.

The sittings of the Police Commissioners are not now open to the public. We understand they were in session at the office of the Chief of Police nearly the whole of Saturday, investigating charges of derelictions of duty preferred against members of the department.

☞ Last evening two men, named Daniel Hillery and John Eckhart, residing in Newark, had a very narrow escape from drowning. They were running down the Jersey City Ferry bridge at fine speed, to catch the boat connecting with the 8 o'clock train, and the steamer having left, they attempted to leap on board, but went headlong into the water. Their screams were heard by Mr. Brenagan and Mr. Cisco, who hastened to their assistance, and with great difficulty the sufferers were rescued from a watery grave. This is another caution to people who are reckless enough to venture jumping after a ferry boat.

☞ The store of Mr. OWEN C. CRANEY, No. 223 South-street, was entered by burglars on the night of the night of the 25th instant, and twenty caulking-irons, a revolving pistol, two boxes of cigars, were stolen therefrom. Yesterday morning two men, named SAMUEL H. KATES and JAMES INGERSOLL, were arrested on a charge of the burglary, and committed to the Essex Market prison to await an examination. A part of the stolen property was found in their possession.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.—Nov. 27.

Before Hon. Judge Betts.

The Court was occupied this morning with a motion in the case of James G. Wilson and William Van Hook vs. John B. Church and James W. Ogden, which was commenced on Saturday.

This is a motion in a suit brought by assignees of the patent for the Woodworth Planing Machine against the defendants as licensees of the Norwood machine for planing, to have feigned issues ordered to try the question of infringement.

For plaintiffs—Mr. Keller and Mr. Blatchford.

For defendants—Mr. Stoughton and Mr. Whiting, of Boston.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—Nov. 27.

Before Judge Ingersoll.

The Court was occupied all day in hearing testimony in the case of Pierce vs. The Steam Propeller Osceola, mentioned some days since, which is brought to recover damages for a collision between the propeller and the schooner John R. Still in Hell Gate.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—Nov. 27.

Before Hon. Judge Ducworth

TRESPASS.

Smith vs. McKenzie.—This is an action to recover the value of fixtures removed by a tenant. The defendant rented the premises No. 708 Broadway for three years, and agreed to expend $500 in repairs and leave the premises in good order. It is alleged that he only expended $300, and that he dismantled and injured the premises so much that they have not been occupied since May last. The damages claimed are $2,250.

The defendant admits the lease, but claims that he has expended more than $500 in improvements, and that the building was injured by fire to the amount of $150, and that he has not been reimbursed for that amount. He alleges that the fixtures removed were distinct from, and formed no part of, the building, and denies injuring the building in any manner.

Before Hon. Justice Hoffman.

DIVORCE.

Louisa Gibbs vs. Gibbs.—This is a suit for divorce, on the ground of adultery. The parties have been married about 23 years, and it is alleged that in April, 1852, and at various times before and since, the defendant committed adultery with various persons, thereby contracting a loathsome disease, which he communicated to the plaintiff. The defendant acts up condonation, and alleges that until June, 1853, they cohabited together. For plaintiff, E. D. Culver and M. Bastord; for defendant, Mr. Ackley.

RAILROAD DAMAGES.

Conway vs. Harlem Railroad Company.—This is an action to recover $5,000 damages for negligently causing the death of Thomas Conway, by running an engine against him in the Company's Engine House. The defendants deny negligence, but say that Conway caused his own death by his own negligence. The complaint was dismissed. For the plaintiff Messrs. Bastord and Wilson. For defendants, C. W. Sanford.

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge Thompson.

SALE OF A NEWSPAPER.

Wells vs. Wingate & Bryce.—This action was brought by the plaintiff as assignee of Griffin & Farnsworth, upon a promissory note for $466, made by the defendants. It appeared that Griffin & Farnsworth were formerly publishers and proprietors of the New-York Dutchman. Several months ago they sold out the establishment, together with its business, circulation, good-will, &c., &c., to the defendant for the sum of $2,700. The note in question was given as part of the consideration of the sale. At the time of the sale, James Derrickson & Co. held a chattel mortgage upon the type and other articles used in the publication of the paper, which mortgage had been duly filed in the Register's office of the City of New-York. After the sale, Derrickson & Co. foreclosed their mortgage, selling all the articles included therein, and then in the possession of the defendants. Griffin informed a Mr. Goodwin, after the sale, that he did not disclose to defendants the existence of the mortgage at the time of the transfer.

The defence set up was that Griffin & Farnsworth were guilty of a fraud, in not disclosing the existence of the mortgage to the defendants, that at the time of the sale, the title to the paper, the New-York Dutchman, was held by them; that, therefore, the note was given without consideration, and was void. The Court held that there was no proof that defendants sought to disavow the contract until a long time had elapsed after the foreclosure of the mortgage, and consequent knowledge of the fraud, if any existed. No proof that the defendant had ever offered to return to Griffin & Farnsworth what they had acquired of the business, circulation, good-will, &c., of the New-York Dutchman establishment, by their contract. And if Griffin & Farnsworth intended to commit a fraud upon defendants, the latter possessed ample facilities for preventing it by a simple examination at the Register's office. In such a transaction the maxim caveat emptor applies. But by the terms of the sale the defendants acquired a title to more than the articles covered by and sold under the mortgage, to-wit: the business, circulation, good-will, &c.; then constituting a good and sufficient consideration for the notes given by them. For these and other legal reasons, judgment must be given for the plaintiff for $494.

Before Judge McCarthy.

ACTIONS FOR SEAMEN'S WAGES.

Joseph C. Reals vs. Benjamin A. Mumford, Henry L. Scott and John Ellsworth; Edwin R. Hurd vs. The Same; Nicholas L. Burbank vs. The Same; Reuben S. Thomson vs. The Same.—These actions were brought to recover wages alleged to be due plaintiffs as seaman on board the ship Palestine. The defendants being owners (Scott, master and part owner) the Palestine left San Francisco about 20th August, 1850, for a port in South America, and from thence to a port in the Atlantic States, at the rate of $70 per month to the port in South America, and the out-going rate from thence. About 1st November, 1850, they arrived at Callao, where the United States Consul certified the wages was $30 per month. They left there and went to the Chincha Islands, and loaded with guano; returned to Callao on their way home, and when some six weeks on the vessel commenced leaking—for over thirty days and for over three thousand strokes an hour—when they started to make for the nearest port, all hands being completely exhausted. They finally made the port of Tarambonas, where the vessel was discharged, condemned and sold; and the plaintiffs (except Reals, who they were discharged, and now bring this suit.

The defence contends that the plaintiffs (except Reals) all abandoned and deserted the vessel, and also that the vessel having made no freight, no wages were earned on the ground of freight being the mother of wages.

As to the plaintiff, Reals, they plead an accord and satisfaction, producing a receipt from him for his average portion of the proceeds of the vessel. The consideration of deserters made by the United States Consul was produced and read in evidence.

The plaintiffs deny any desertion, and insist on their claims on the ground that they were regularly discharged. Cause pending, he reserve his decision until to-morrow morning.

J. Hardy Prince, Esq., of Boston, for plaintiff.

contended that the receipt of Reals being extorted from him, he being a stranger, without friends or money, could not in any manner destroy his claim, and cited Ward's R., 464; Ainslie' Rights and Duties of Seamen, 322, 374. As to the other plaintiffs, they were regularly discharged. Certificates to the contrary will entitled to wages. 5 Peter's S. C. C., No. 667; 7 Law Reporter, 323. That as to the log-book it did not comply with the requirements of law. 2 Stuarts'. That if the men had deserted the Consul did not perform his duty. Vide Act of Congress, July 20, 1840. 1 Gilmore, 618, as to effect of certificate. Altogether the testimony was overwhelming for the plaintiffs.

The Court sustained the position of the plaintiffs, and after deducting the amounts received by them, gave judgment for Worth, $201 66; Reals, $220 19; Thompson, $201 66; Burbank, $220 19, besides costs.

THE EAST RIVER COLLISION.

Peter A. Peterson and others vs. The Union Ferry Company of Brooklyn.—In this case, brought to recover damage for injuries sustained by a collision on the East River, and destruction of a small boat, the Court gave judgment for the plaintiffs, and assessed the damages at $250. A full report of this case appeared on Saturday. There is another suit pending to recover for the loss of a man who was drowned by the casualty.

LONG ISLAND.

THE WILLIAMSBURG RIOTS.

Examination of the Rioters.

Before Justice Boswell and the Mayor.

SEVENTH DAY.

The examination of the persons charged with being engaged in the recent election riots in the Fourteenth Ward was resumed yesterday, before Justice BOSWELL and the Mayor. The Court-room was crowded as usual. The greater part of the session was occupied in discussing motions for the discharge of prisoners.

Mr. Crooke moved to discharge Patrick Fagan, on the ground that there was no evidence against him, except that he was on the ground as a voter at the time Silkworth was dragged out. He contended that most of the persons on the part of the prosecution were not voters in that ward, and the unfortunate occurrence which resulted in the death of Harrison and Smith, was caused by the presence of those persons who had no business there. He also placed the origin of the disturbance upon Silkworth, who acted as challenger, on the ground that he was not a voter, and consequently was resented and finally dragged out.

District Attorney said, admitting Mr. Silkworth was not a legal voter, they had no right to thrust him out; that should be left to the officers of the law. This act was the commencement of the riot which resulted so disastrously. Silkworth was there lawfully, he being a special deputy, and the mob were not justifiable in attacking him.

The motion for discharge was denied by the Court.

In accordance with a proposition made by the District Attorney, Patrick M. Doyle was discharged.

Mr. Crook then called the attention of the Court to the testimony against Edward McHugh, the only evidence against him was that of Gardner, who testified that he heard McHugh say if the Democrats laid hands upon him he would see their heart's blood.

The Court agreed with the District Attorney that his comment needed further explanation, as his remarks tended to excite a riot.

A motion to discharge James Reed was also deferred, to hear explanation.

Mr. Crooke called up the case of Michael McQuade, the only evidence against him being that of John Brown. He proposed to prove that McQuade was not present.

The Court said the testimony went to show that McQuade was in the crowd with an unlawful weapon.

Mr. Crooke—No Sir! I insist that a club in an Irishman's hands is not an unlawful weapon. [Laughter.]

The motion for discharge was denied.

Motions were then made for the discharge of Bernard O'Neil, John Pepper and Patrick Hains, but were denied by the Court for the present.

Mr. Lapough then proposed to enter upon the defence of Patrick McQuade.

William McKenre, sworn: I reside in North Second-street; remember the disturbance on election day; was working in the cellar corner Grand and Seventh-streets; broke off between 10 and 11 on account of the rain; Patrick McQuade was also there and left at the same time; I did, returning again between 12 and 1 o'clock; he had two or three drinks; his was the second cart that came into the cellar after dinner; he continued carting the remainder of the day.

Cross-examined—Mr. McQuade lives in Eleventh-street; I was not in the fight that day.

Q.—Did Mr. McQuade tell you about the fight after he came back that afternoon?

Witness—It's feeling me yet! I have lived here seven years; do not know that McQuade is a voter.

Hugh McElroy, sworn: I was working at the corner of Grand and Seventh-streets on Election day; was driving cart, and was in the run with Mr. McQuade until 10½ o'clock; it then commenced raining and we started for home; saw McQuade there in the afternoon; I was the first home there. [Laughter.]

District Attorney—Then you're a horse, are you?

McQuade was the next after me; was not in the run with him in the afternoon.

Cross-examined—McQuade lives in Eleventh-street; might have heard persons speaking about the fight as they passed on the walk.

District Attorney—Q.—Now you, McElroy, are you a Know-Nothing? A.—No Sir, I don't know nothing.

Mr. Lapough—His countenance shows that.

Dennis Brannigan, sworn: I was at work at the corner of Grand and Seventh-streets on Election day, driving cart; McQuade was there, and we worked together until 10½ o'clock; parted with him at Mr. Curran's door; was in the same run with McQuade that afternoon, from about 2½ to 6½ o'clock.

Cross-examined—Heard about the fight, but did not go to any of the polls.

Peter McCurran, sworn: I was working corner Grand and Seventh streets on the day of election; helped put the tools in McQuade's cart when it commenced raining, and assisted to take them out at Curran's stable; I took dinner with him, and did not go back to work.

Cross-examined—It was 10 minutes to 11 o'clock when McQuade and me went into the house; Pat McQuade told me there had been a fight at the election.

Q.—You don't belong to the Know-Nothings!

Witness—I belong to the hard-bank diggings; I belong to no secret society.

Patrick McQuade, sworn: Q. by Mr. Lapough—Are you a brother of Michael McQuade?

Witness—I don't know; people call me his brother.

A Voice—It's a wise child that knows its own father. [Laughter.]

After dinner I assisted him to get up the horse and went back to the cellar with him.

Cross-examined—I was in the house from 10½ o'clock until dinner time; was not at the fight; heard about it that day; do not know who told me.

Michael O'Neil testified that he gave out tickets that day, corner of Seventh and North Fifth-streets, to the same persons; saw McQuade there about every twenty minutes for loads, except between 10½ and 11 o'clock, at which time it rained.

Mr. Lapough here moved for the discharge of McQuade.

The Court preferred to hear the evidence in each case, and decide upon them together.

John McCurran sworn—I saw Michael McQuade when he came home on the day in question; took dinner with him and saw him go to his work about 12½ o'clock.

Cross-examined—McQuade was out of the house about 15 minutes; he was home at 11½ o'clock.

Stephen McGrath sworn—I saw Edward McHugh at the polls in question about 9 o'clock; he was doing nothing but electioneering; was by him when five or six Democrats came around him and flourished their clubs; he did nothing to them.

Cross-examined—While the Democrats were there McHugh asked

Legal Inquiry into Disasters.

It is beginning to be clear that neither the General Government nor our local authorities intend to have any investigation into the causes and circumstances of the loss of the Arctic and of the New Era. So far as any legal action is concerned, neither of these dreadful disasters excites any more attention than the harmless upsetting of an ash-cart in Broadway. If a drunken sailor falls off the dock and is drowned, the law provides an inquest into the causes of his death; and, although little good results from such investigations as they are usually conducted, the law preserves a sort of theoretical regard for human life, and an ostensible desire to throw around it all reasonable security. But a gigantic steamer sinks in mid ocean,—and through incapacity on the part of the commander, the cowardice of the crew, the culpable negligence of the owners, or some other cause which inquiry would determine, two or three hundred of our best known and best loved friends go down to death;—and not a solitary question is ever asked by the law or its ministers, as to the reason of this awful catastrophe. A large ship is run ashore at the very entrance of our harbor;—there, within a few hundred yards of the land, with steam-tugs plying about her, two or three hundred human beings, men, women and children, are left helpless upon the wreck by the desertion of the captain and crew,—some are swept off at once by the merciful sea, while others perish from cold and exposure endured through a long and cheerless night;—survivors are in our streets declaring that nothing but the negligence of the captain and mate of this doomed vessel caused her wreck: and yet no man lifts a finger,—no coroner, prosecuting attorney, grand jury or other functionary of the law, stirs a step towards making inquest into this wholesale slaughter! The owners of the ship make public proclamation of the innocence of their hirelings;—the wail of agony goes up from surviving friends;—insurance companies pay their losses;—and the surface of public thought is as smooth and unruffled as if nothing had ever troubled its peace.

It is a disgrace to our laws and to our pretended civilization, that this should be so. A race of cannibals could not evince greater indifference to human life than we display. There is not another country in the world, pretending to maintain laws for the public good, that would pass over such events without inquiry. Our provincial neighbors in Canada shame our callous barbarism by their vigilant fidelity to public trusts.

It is idle to plead that nobody has any authority to institute such investigations. If the plea were true it would be doubly disgraceful. But it is not. The Federal Government has a perfect right to order an inquiry into the causes of the wreck of one of its ocean mail steamers, placed under its supervision by the law, and subject in all respects to its control. Such an inquiry ought instantly to be ordered. The credit of the country, the honor of the Collins line, the agony of a bereaved community and the public sentiment of the whole country demand that we should know something more than the volunteer vigilance of the Press, unsupported by law and uncertain of truth, has brought to light of this sad affair. And in the case of the New Era there is still less ground for such a plea. We have laws requiring seamanship and good conduct on the part of our commanders. On the face of the matter the loss of the New Era under the circumstances raises a presumption that these qualities were lacking. And besides this, living witnesses have made public statements that both captain and mate were regardless of their duty; that their own misconduct caused the wreck and the dreadful loss of life by which it was attended. These witnesses are still among us, and yet our District Attorney, whose special business it is to prosecute such cases, has not yet moved a single step towards procuring their testimony or holding these officers to their responsibility.

We trust the Legislature of this State will take this matter in hand, at its coming Session, and provide such a remedy as the emergency of the case requires. We have a good precedent in our City regulation concerning fires. It is now made the duty of a special officer,—the Fire Marshal—to investigate the origin of every fire that may occur, whether attended by a loss of life or not. Let the same principle be applied to all disasters. Let it be made the duty of some tribunal, either now existing, or to be created for the purpose, to order an immediate inquiry into every casualty upon railroads, steamboats or ships bound for or owned in this port, by which any personal injury shall be sustained. At present there is no provision for any such investigation, except by Coroner's inquest upon dead bodies. But it ought to be extended to every instance in which any injury is sustained. If such a tribunal had been directed to order such an inquiry in case of the Arctic, we should have known long ere this, from legal and authentic evidence, just where the blame rests for that disaster. Those who are justly responsible for it would have been held to their responsibility,—and the innocent would no longer rest under an unjust and crushing suspicion. Railroad accidents are of almost daily occurrence, serious in their injuries to person and property, into which no inquiry is ever made, and concerning which nothing is ever known beyond the voluntary revelations of those implicated or the random investigations of newspaper reporters.

The Legislature of this State can do something towards introducing a better state of things, by such legislation as that suggested. We hope the matter will receive the early attention of that body at its approaching Session.

Russia in Alliance with the European Revolution.

Some time since the European journals circulated the report that the Emperor of Russia intended restoring Poland to the condition of an independent sovereignty, under the sceptre of one of his sons. KOSSUTH also in his speech at Sheffield threatened the Hapsburg dynasty with a coalition between Russia and the Revolution. And now we have information through private sources, that a number of arrests have been made in Pesth in consequence of alleged complicity of the arrested with the Russian Government. The Czar himself has taken up his residence at Warsaw, the Capital of the ancient Kingdom of Poland, and has given orders to surround the Gallician frontier of Austria by a large body of troops. We have reason to believe that these important statements are not without foundation. A coalition with the Revolution is certainly not at all out of the line of Russia's traditional policy. We will therefore impartially examine what chance of success these attempts can have, and what should be the position to be taken in such an event by a sound view of Revolutionary politics.

The assertion that Russia is the first and most powerful enemy and opposer of Revolution, has become in the opinion of the press and the public, within the last few years, an axiom which is held to be irrefragable; but it admits of a considerable limitation when examined by the light of facts. Russia is far from being the opponent upon principle of the Revolution, which she constantly represents herself to be. She favors the Revolutionary party whenever she hopes to gain her object more completely than she can by supporting the powers that be. Her endeavor has accordingly been to secure influence in all neighboring States;—if possible a stipulated, lawful influence, in order first to play the part of umpire, and afterwards, under this pretence, to gain the whole power into her own hands. If the government of the State in question be not disposed to extend the hand to her, then Russia attaches herself to the opposition, taking sides even with the rebel party, and giving the Revolutionary side the stamp of legality. This policy Russia has successfully used in regard to Poland and Greece, as well as Servia, Moldavia and Wallachia.

In Poland, between the years '60 and '70 of the last century, Russia supported the Dissenters from the Roman Catholic religion,—who, according to the laws of the latter, were excluded from many political rights,—against the majority of the nation, and against the Government—summoning them to form confederations, and to make an armed resistance, finally joining its forces with those of the Revolutionary party in order to carry their demands. Whatever may be thought of the right or wrong which the Polish Government and States general exercised towards the dissenters; this much is certain, that Russia in this case supported rebellion,—insurrection against the existing power. Nearly twenty years later, when the Polish nation shortly before its fall once more gathered together all its strength in order to construct itself anew upon a basis more in conformity with the spirit of the age, it was again Russia who took the part of the minority against the majority. This time, it is true, she made her appearance as the defender of the old system, just as before she had defended the new,—she demanded the maintenance of the old Constitution, but again she supported that party which opposed itself to the majority of the nation. Moreover, at that time she announced loudly that it was for Polish freedom that she sought.

As in Poland so also in Turkey, has Russia always supported all revolts against the Sultan, sometimes, indeed, having excited or called them forth herself. So it was lately in Epirus. Here the Russians found it much to their advantage that the population of these provinces belonged to the Greek Church, and that they, accordingly, under the mask of protectors of the Greek faith, could step into the field against its pretended oppressors among the Mahomedans. Even had the Greek Christians been obliged to suffer much from the Turks, this is far from being sufficient reason for a power which announces itself to be the centre of conservatism, to justify, strengthen and take under its protection rebellions against the ruling Government.

In Greece, too, it was Russia who instigated the Revolution of September, 1853, in the hope thereby to secure to herself an exclusive influence upon the Greek Government. It was by no means part of her plan that the consequence of this revolution was an independent constitution.

In Germany, at the time of the wars for independence, she openly advocated the insurrection of the people against the Princes of the Rhenish Confederation, in case the latter would not join themselves to Russia or Prussia. These Princes, she said in the proclamation of Kalisch, must deservedly be annihilated by the power of public opinion and the justifiable strength of arms. We have in a former article described at length how, in the period between 1830–40, Russia, at the same moment when she appeared as the ally of Austria and Prussia, coquetted with the smaller German States in regard to liberalism, rendered the stability system of Austria ridiculous, and warmed all against the Prussian Zollverein.

In France Russia was for that period of time a decided friend of the liberal party, and in a certain sense she may be regarded as the ally of the Revolution of July—or at least of certain parties which directly and indirectly brought it on. The Ministry of MARTIGNAC, which replaced that of VILLELE and preceded that of POLIGNAC, was liberal, although in regard to its foreign policy not free from desire of conquest, and by no means inaccessible to adventurous plans for the extension of the Kingdom. At the time when the Russo-Turkish war broke out, this Ministry guided the helm of Government. Russia held it to be very important that France should be thrown over to her side, and accordingly flattered the Ministry in every possible way, expressing herself in the most favorable manner in regard to the liberal tendencies, and appearing to be the most decided opponent of POLIGNAC, who represented the purest conservatism, endeavoring also to oppose his entrance into power, in which she at first succeeded. And when in August, 1829, he became President of the Ministry, Russia was still decidedly unfriendly to his Government, for this reason only, that POLIGNAC was a good friend of WELLINGTON, and as a general thing, in foreign affairs followed rather the English policy, while MARTIGNAC adopted neither English nor Austrian, but Russian views. It however cost Russia no struggle to side with and support the liberal Ministry, while it opposed POLIGNAC, the high conservative opponent of the Revolution. Indeed, when the Revolution of July took place, the Russian Ambassador, POZZO DI BORGO, played no unimportant part in the abdication of CHARLES X and the elevation of LOUIS PHILLIPPE. It is true that the Emperor NICHOLAS at a later period assumed quite another position towards the Revolution of July and the ORLEANS dynasty. But by that time the latter had developed their European character, and threatened to become dangerous to him in his own empire and in Poland.

These examples might be followed by many more, especially if we should consider the policy of Russia towards other countries beside those of Europe. But they are sufficient to establish the fact that Russia is not an opponent of Revolution at all risks. She has only designs, but no principles. To-day she comes forth as the opponent of the Revolution, to-morrow as its ally. She seizes upon all that can serve her purposes, and turns it to her own advantage. To-day she allures the Governments by representing to them that their only salvation from anarchy is in Russia; to-morrow she endeavors to persuade the people, through her agents, that they can alone through the aid of Russia reach happiness, prosperity, and freedom from their hated yoke. But never yet has her pretended support been carried out in reality, and never yet has any people or party been led by it to one victory. On the contrary, as soon as the liberal parties obtained the superiority, and prepared to consolidate the position gained by it, Russia acted treacherously against them, and sided again with their oppressors and enemies. To enter into relations with such a power, can therefore neither be advantageous nor honorable. The leaders of the liberal parties in London will do well to be on their guard. If Revolution does not in itself find strength to attain its aims, an alliance with Russia will surely not be the way to enable it to accomplish them.

In Hard Times Keep Out of Debt.

Keep out of debt and you are rich; not rich in all senses, but, in most, richer than many who have the reputation. Mr. A., who drove past a moment ago, is taxed as if he were worth a hundred thousand, but his liabilities are a hundred and fifty thousand. He will fail in less than a month and retire upon the profits of the failure, and be hereafter a broken merchant with money enough, and a shabby reputation. You owe no cent and have hardly a cent to show after buying your next dinner; but nobody looks on you as the cause of his ruin, nobody fails because of your failure to meet your engagements; no widows turn their rebuking eyes on you; no orphans charge you with the authorship of their want. With your empty pocket you are richer than he in his (un-) comfortable retirement with money enough (that does not belong to him.)

Out of debt, every sixpence you get ahead is your own; you may look on it with an unalloyed sensation of right to save or to spend it, to turn it into any fashion of pleasure or enjoyment that it is equal to. But in debt, your money is not your own. It belongs to your baker, butcher, grocer, tailor,—or the old uncle who was silly enough to lend to you.

It is not hard for a man who is making a living—who gets decent wages—to keep out of debt, and generally he ought to do it. If he does not make living wages, it is a different thing. For borrowing is better than starving, and a debt is less to be dreaded than no bread. And again, when one has, as capital, a good trade or profitable profession, or a stock on hand that is not immediately convertible into cash, he is foolish not to take a hundred dollars if he can have use of it for six dollars a year, and yet be sure of the principal to repay when it is demanded. But to go in debt for a luxury, or a mere convenience, or for any other than an absolute necessity, is always a matter of doubtful propriety. Some borrow and make fortunes on their borrowed capital before pay day comes. But for such operations, great brains or an easy conscience are required, and where one succeeds, ten fail. In these tight times, when Wall-street is like one's mouth after eating persimmons, when rents fall fifty per cent. and the "safest" men are shaking, it behooves all small dealers to look sharp to their accounts. Let them owe no man, if they are so fortunate as to be thus far out of debt, and be quite sure, too, that no man owes them, except his debt be secured by the most undoubted security. For in these times whoever has lent is around looking up the borrower with the most assiduous perseverance, and it is distressing to note how many borrowers are not at home when such call. Let the ornaments go unbought this season. Let the amusements be forsworn. Let the coat—we talk to unpretending people—be coarser than last year; and, ladies, let the bonnet be a dollar or two plainer. Put what you meant to spend for a wreath into the coal bin, and what you designed for a velvet that should surpass Mrs. Smith's, into the flour barrel. Be hard up for weeks together; wear a patch on your garment; wear a napless hat; eat cheap joints instead of "fine" ones; get sirloin instead of porter-house steaks; rent a second floor instead of a whole house; live comfortably instead of keeping up appearances; do anything that is honest—never mind whether it is "respectable"—rather than in such times as these to run in debt.

Investigation of the Origin of Fires.

Nature allows us to take it for granted that men shall die in their beds, as a general rule; and that houses built with common care shall stand long enough to repay amply the money expended in their construction. So, when a man falls dead in the street, a Coroner holds an inquest on his fallen body. But in case of a fire that consumes the building, the law makes small provision or none at all for investigating its origin or for discovering whether or not it was the work of mischievous or malicious persons. And the results are notable. When bad men think of knocking others down in the street, visions of gibbets and solitary cells flash up before them. But incendiaries must enjoy, while plotting their crimes, a remarkable immunity from all such nervousness. They set fire to stores, and for anything that we can tell, go to dine with reputable men. They do their deeds and no questions are asked. The sufferer complains, but his complaint is held to be only an unmanly exhibition of his lack of acquiescence in the will of Providence; or if he happened to be well insured, is possibly construed into a desire to kick up a dust that some criminal negligence of his own may be overlooked.

This certainly is not quite as it should be. There must be a reason for every destructive conflagration as surely as for every sudden death, and it is not to our credit to pronounce the one any more than the other "unaccountable," until competent persons have examined the evidence and are satisfied. Either we have a nest of house-burners still prowling about the City, whose occupation will never be gone until they are more carefully watched, or there may be some counterpart of the "Vitriol-man," going about monomaniacally setting fire to the houses of the people for a sore conscience's sake. In either case, an inquest competently authorized would be likely, at an early day, to ferret out the cause of our great loss by fire. The success of the movement on the part of the Insurance Companies toward establishing such an office in this City, shows what might be done under a more thorough system. We see by the Montreal Herald, that a petition is to be presented to the Provincial Parliament, asking the adoption of measures of security. We quote a part of the petition. A State law for New-York, of the sort for which they ask, might save very much property. They say:

> That nothing, in the opinion of your petitioners, would tend more to the repression of fires, than the establishment of a tribunal, or the appointment of an officer, vested with full powers to investigate the origin and circumstances of every fire, and whose duty it shall be promptly to report to the Government and all parties interested the result of each investigation.
> That with this view the necessary powers may be vested in the Coroner or other officer, to be appointed for each city town and district.
> Your petitioners further represent, that as it sometimes happens that it may become necessary for the public good, and in order to arrest the spread of a conflagration, for the authorities to blow up, or otherwise destroy the property of individuals, it is most desirable that the law in such cases should be clearly defined, so that no doubts may exist as to the liability of the hundred, municipality or district, to be assessed for damage so caused and sustained.

Camphene and Burning Fluid.

Undoubtedly the time will come when people will stuff their mattresses with gunpowder and keep live rattlesnakes in wicker-baskets, for their children to play with. It will be dangerous, of course, but, then, how exciting!—how like reading a novel that is all "catastrophe," living will be!

Our people enjoy their "narrow escapes" very much. None under the sun are so fond of them. We do not mean that they like to be blown up and killed, but simply that to feel they are on the verge of an explosion every minute, and every hour that they have just been on the edge of a terrific accident, gives them a zest for their newspaper, and makes their morning call a "love of a little visit."

We might refer to our railroad rushings out of time and into each other's cars—to our collisions at sea, all because fog-whistles would make lady passengers nervous—to our cob-house pilings up of brick and stone, to let for thirty per cent. on the cost of building, or to sundry other notable tokens of our considerable recklessness of life, and of our feeling of preparation—charitably we construe it—to depart this slow life. But we stop only to point once more to the camphene nuisance.

If you ask your camphene man about the danger of using the article he vends, he will tell you that camphene is indeed explosive, but that burning fluid is perfectly harmless. He tells you stuff. The two articles are essentially the same. Camphene proper is the rectified turpentine, and burning fluid is a mixture of alcohol and turpentine; both are explosive, and as only the latter is used for lighting dwelling-houses where cleanliness is any object, the distinction made is substantially nonsense. The burning fluid that you use, reader, in the hands of a safe person, with a perfectly tight lamp, is harmless. But few persons are safe ones to manage burning fluid. Note how many of the accidents that happen are caused from filling lamps while the wick is burning! The person that does it scarcely deserves to escape a burning, yet thousands do it, and the safe ones we do not meet daily.

Even with safe persons, much care must be taken that the lamps are tight. If on going about the room, the fluid spills over the side of the lamp, the least flaring of the light is liable to involve the whole in flame. Either, in such emergency, the holder must heroically hold on till the whole is burned off, not always omitting to singe his own hand, or he may dash it down, scatter the fluid and the flame together, and with earnest expedition give the alarm of fire,—since in all human probability it will need the firemen to save his dwelling from ashes. It is hard in these hard times to throw away property, but if you have any such leaky lamps in your house, the cheapest way to treat them is to throw them into the street.

Children and servants—unless such as you would trust your jewelry with and leave alone to cook a turkey for next Thursday's dinner—ought never to be allowed to handle "fluid" lamps, especially glass ones. That fine girl of yours, as she trips down stairs with one in her hand, should she by accident stumble, would bring a world of wo into your household. Shattering the glass in fragments, the fluid is spread over the floor and on her dress; the flame leaping from the wick with the inflammable material, is almost sure to burn her horribly, and add another to the list of "Destructive Fires." And as to the servants, the depth of their probable ignorance is only equaled by the height of your folly to trust them. For any common use about the house, it must be confessed after many years of costly experience, that "burning fluid" is not safe.

Nobody will stop using it on this account, however. The fact that it is very dear—retailing at 25 cents the quart—will affect some, possibly. Better, if you are coming to your senses, reader, take your lamps at once to the lamp-store and have them all refitted for oil, or something else than "camphene" in any of its forms. If not, be consistent, and stuff your pin-cushions and mattresses with gun-powder, and buy a rattlesnake as a pet for your growing boy to play with.

☞ The "War correspondent" of the London Times sends regularly to that journal the most graphic and picturesque descriptions of the military operations in the Crimea. In literary merit his correspondence is very remarkable. We can recall nothing in military history more vivid or more thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the scene, than the detailed account of the cavalry movement in front of Balaklava, which was published at length in the DAILY TIMES of yesterday morning. Every step taken is noted with the utmost precision—the time of each movement is given to the minute—and the reader has the most life-like picture of the passing events which words can give.

The Times correspondent in the Crimea is understood to be a Mr. RUSSELL, who has been engaged upon that paper in various capacities for some time past. He wrote the description of the opening of the Irish Crystal Palace, and has generally been detailed for description of striking incidents. He receives £1,500 a year for his present services,—a handsome compensation, certainly, but not more than they are worth. He is an Irishman and has been connected with the English Navy.

Musical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Although in many respects the strongest programme of the season was offered last night, the attendance was by no means crowded. The house was sufficiently full to look cheerful, and the audience properly enthusiastic.

The first and second acts of "Puritani," and the finale to "Lucia di Lammermoor" were in the programme. Of the former, we have little to add beyond what we have already said. Signors SUSINI and BERNARDI, (BADIALI being sick,) thought fit to vulgarize the liberty duet by introducing two perfectly inappropriate flags. The management is to blame for putting temptation (in the shape of bunting) in the way of artists who have a proclivity towards error, and who seem to be perfectly indifferent to public opinion on this subject.

Madame GRISI was in superb voice; in the second act her magnificent acting, added to the charms of her perfect vocalization, elicited repeated bursts of applause.

To many the feature of the evening was the finale to "Lucia." This exquisitely pathetic piece of writing has always been interpreted in its greatest dramatic purity by Signor MARIO. The sentiment and passion of the composer find a natural response in the delicate and vigorous contrast of this artist's wonderful voice. Beyond saying that Signor MARIO did justice to himself and his great reputation, we have no words to express the satisfaction experienced by the audience.

Signor ALBONI, the scenic artist of the establishment, seems determined to overshadow all the other artists of the City. Unconventionality and a vigorous tone of coloring are his strong points, to which we may of course add correctness of perspective and the usual requisites of an artist. The moonlight scene of the country at Ravenswood is in every respect the best effort of his genius, and received a tremendous round of applause. Nothing finer has been seen in New-York.

The programme will be repeated on Wednesday evening.

We have received the following communication regarding the morning performances. We agree with our correspondent that they are a boon to a large class of musical folk.

> Many persons hailed with delight the announcement to have a morning opera, whereby those from a distance, invalids and young folks, who could not attend of an evening, would have an opportunity through such kind consideration for them, to listen to the charming music of GRISI and MARIO, and they deeply regret the day so lusted proved so unpropitious as to keep them away, though they trust it will not prevent another attempt. This class of hearers would feel under still greater obligation if they could be indulged by the performance of the favorite "Norma," which, though listened to so often by an evening audience, they have not yet heard. It would oblige MANY BROOKLYNITES.

Drama.

Miss AGNES ROBERTSON is playing at the Walnut-street Theatre, Philadelphia, and appears to be highly successful. Mr. BOURCICAULT's local review, called "Apollo in America," was produced there last night. It is underlined at Mr. BURTON's.

The Buffalo papers are filled with eulogiums upon Miss MAHRAN, who seems to have made a sensation. The Daily Republic considers this lady one of the most promising candidates for public favor on the stage, and speaks of her acting in terms of unqualified praise. The Express says that "she cannot fail to become one of the most lustrous jewels in the dramatic casket." The Commercial Advertiser gives her credit for the conception, and acting originality, and adds that "she cannot fail to attain an enviable position, and make her mark in the theatrical world." The Courier and Enquirer Post and Herald equally eulogize Miss MAHRAN, who has, no doubt, much improved by the experience she has gained since her debut in this City. We hope when she next appears in New-York, she will be ably supported. The Broadway Theatre is the proper place for her.

Miss TERESSA EGMONDE will repeat her readings from the Irish Poets this evening, at Hope Chapel.

Another Bank Defalcation.

Another Bank trouble came to light yesterday at the National Bank. The Paying Teller, Mr. HOWLAND, who has been connected with the Bank since 1832, has been detected in an attempt to embezzle $60,000. At the meeting of the Directors on Friday, a considerable reduction was discovered in the item of the outstanding circulation of the Bank. It appeared on examination that the Teller had withdrawn from his cash $60,000, or $80,000 in circulating notes, and nearly all the amount was found upon his person. The Bank sustains no loss, in consequence of the prompt measures taken by the President of the Bank, Mr. JAMES GALLATIN, at the moment the fraud was discovered. It seems that the Teller had kept his account right until Friday, when his robbery reached the climax and he was discovered. On the preceding Tuesday the report to the Board was found to be accurate in every particular.

The "Vitriol Man."—Additional Complaints.

The "Vitriol Man" yet remains in close custody. Yesterday an additional complaint was made against GRAY by WM. J. SHELY, of Jersey City, who, with a young lady acquaintance, was walking down Broadway a few evening ago, when the vitriol machine was brought into requisition, and their clothing was damaged to the amount of $100. To these facts the complainant made an affidavit. MRS GEORGE H. PENNIMAN, residing at No. 42 East Fourteenth-street, had an elegant opera cloak and silk dress entirely destroyed by this operation. The loss is about $90. Mrs. P. was accompanied at the time by her husband, and they were leaving the Opera House on the evening of the 17th inst., when the malicious act was perpetrated.

The Jersey City Liquor Trials.

The trials of those complained of for selling liquor illegally yet continue before Recorder CUTTER. Yesterday HIRAM RATHBONE, of the Dacey House, was fined $120 and costs on six complaints. He will appeal to the Supreme Court. JOHN ARBUCKLE, who keeps at the corner of Montgomery and Greene-streets, has been fined $90 and costs; OWEN MCCUE, $30 and costs. Dr. GARDNER, who keeps a drug store, was fined $10 and costs on one charge, and it is stated that this was procured on a pretence of medicinal use, and drunk in his store, he being at the time absent.

APPOINTMENT BY THE GOVERNOR.—Col. F. L. HAGADORN, of Staten Island, to be Engineer-in-Chief, with rank as Brigadier General from the 24th November, inst.

RADWAY'S REGULATORS

A new triumph in Medical Science. The best medicine in the form of pills in use—Radway's Regulators are prepared on the R. R. R. theory, which is entirely different to all other modes of treating the cause of pain and cure of disease. In six hours after a dose of Regulators are taken, a great change for the better will take place; the drooping spirits will revive, and the mind become awakened with pleasant sensations of returning health. One dose of Radway's Regulators will be found sufficient. In the short space of six hours they will change for the better the whole condition of the system, and restore a healthy regularity of action to every nerve and tissue of the body. They differ from all other pills or purgative medicines; they do not prostrate the system with violent drastic purgings; they do not leave the bowels costive after an operation, as most of the common pills of the day invariably do. One of Radway's Regulators taken on going to bed at night will insure a pleasant discharge from the bowels in the morning. They correct all irregularities, both in the male and female organs, and will cure the most obstinate cases of Liver Complaints, Kidney Difficulties, Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Biliousness, &c. They are pleasant to take, being elegantly coated with gum. Dose—one to three regulators. Sold by all druggists. RADWAY & Co., Proprietors of Radway's Ready Relief and Renovating Resolvent. Office No. 162 Fulton-st., up stairs, New-York.

The weak, the feeble, the infirm, the nervous, the delicate, are in a few days strengthened by their operation, and the vigorous constitution is improved by perseverance, without the assistance of a physician. Adapted to all circumstances and situations, they are the best medicine ever intended for families, or to take to sea, preventing scurvy and costiveness, requiring no change of diet, particular regimen, or care against taking cold.

"PROGRESS AND PREJUDICE."
BY MRS. GORE.
"Mrs. Gore, it would seem, is incapable of writing an uninteresting novel, for whatever faults her books have had, they have always found eager readers even among the better educated and more fastidious classes of readers. It is not probable that more than one or two of them will be read from year to year; but for the present day, they afford a pleasant end in no way injurious mental repetition to those who find in some of the various duties of life their real intellectual labor. Far, far, as they are above the Lamplighters, the Newsboys, the Fashions and Famines of the day, they still belong to that class of books which dissipate and generate those idle minds which are nothing else, although the learning which they occasionally display may mislead some persons into a misappreciation of their caliber. Progress and Prejudice is a cleverly written, ingeniously constructed story, for the most part truthful, and altogether unhurtful."
NINE THOUSAND
of this very interesting novel have already been sold. TENTH THOUSAND in new ready.
Price in cloth 75 cents; in paper 50 cents.
For sale by all booksellers.

COMPLEXION OF ABBOTT'S FRANCONIA STORIES,
AND A NEW VOLUME, BY THE AUTHOR OF
"THE OLD HOUSE BY THE RIVER."
HARPER & BROTHERS, No. 82 Pearl-st.
PUBLISH THIS WEEK.
I.
TO DAY:
LATER YEARS.—By the Author of "The Old House by the River." 12mo., Muslin, $1.
This work consists of sketches, legends, descriptive essays and the like. It is distinguished by the same sweetness and pathos of sentiment, the same picturesqueness and vigor of description, and the same graceful flow of diction, which have won such a flattering welcome to the former productions of the author. He has made his place good among our most natural and feasible writers on rural scenes, and the present work will enhance his enviable reputation. Though selecting prose to his medium for expression, he has the eye and the heart of a poet, and his words will always find an echo among readers of a poetical temperament.
II.
ON SATURDAY, DEC. 2:
AGNES.—A Franconia Story. By JACOB ABBOTT. Engraved Title-page and numerous Illustrations. 16mo., Muslin, 50 cents.
III.
ON THE SAME DAY:
CAROLINE.—A Franconia Story. By JACOB ABBOTT. Engraved Title-page and numerous Illustrations. 16mo., Muslin, 50 cents.
With the appearance of AGNES & CAROLINE, the publication of the series of FRANCONIA STORIES is complete.
The following are the titles of the volumes in their natural order.

MALLEVILLE.	RODOLPHUS.
WALLACE.	ELLEN LINN.
MARY BESSINE.	STUYVESANT.
MARY BELL.	CAROLINE.
BEECHNUT.	AGNES.

Each volume is an entirely distinct and independent work—having no necessary connection of incidents with those that precede or follow it—while yet the characters of the scenes in which the stories are laid are substantially the same in all. They present peaceful pictures of happy domestic life, and are intended not chiefly to amuse and entertain the children who shall peruse them, but to furnish them with attractive lessons of moral and intellectual instruction, and to train their hearts to habits of ready and cheerful subordination to duty and law.
HARPER & BROTHERS, HAVE NOW READY:
HISTORY OF THE CONSTITUTION—History of the Origin, Formation and Adoption of the Constitution of the United States. By GEORGE TICKNOR CURTIS. To be completed in two large and handsome Octavo Volumes. Vol. 1., Muslin, $3 50.
This work, by an accomplished scholar, will supply a want which has never been adequately met in the historical literature of the country. It embraces the period from the commencement of the Revolution to the assembling of the Convention of 1787, showing the causes which rendered the calling of that body inevitable, and which gave the shape and coloring to its decisions; explaining the foundations on which our national liberty and prosperity were thus erected by the wisdom of those who, during the Revolution, gave birth; and presenting a series of graphic memoirs of the principal members of the Convention. In preparing this great national work, Mr. CURTIS enjoyed the advantage of the counsel and aid of Mr. DANIEL WEBSTER, who took the liveliest interest in its completion, and urged its importance almost in the last days of his life. Written in a condensed and vigorous style, founded on accurate and persevering historical research, crowding a lively succession of stirring events and incidents, and presenting the characters of the illustrious framers of the Constitution in bold and discriminating portraits, this highly important work is adapted to occupy a distinguished place in the records of American history. It will be welcomed as an acceptable contribution to our political literature, and cannot fail to challenge the attention and admiration of our statesmen, scholars, and politicians, no less than the great body of the American people.

Unparalleled success! Twelfth thousand yet to Press!
LIFE IN THE CLEARINGS.
BY MRS. MOODIE.
All who have read "Roughing it in the Bush" will want this companion to it, which shows the same brilliant powers of description which marked Mrs. Moodie's other works, though, fortunately for our heroine, the darker shades of the picture are not presented in so prominent a manner as before, inasmuch as being herself now more happily situated, she was in a mood to see the cheerful side. We cannot a few recommendations of the Press:
From the Christian Herald, Detroit.
This book is equal, if not superior to either of the preceding volumes from the same author.
From the Knickerbocker, Albany.
No better reading can be accorded for amusement and instruction than this book.
From the Courant, Hartford.
She possesses much wit, humor and pathos, and always delights her readers.
From the City Fact, Columbus, Ohio.
It should be made a welcome visitor to every fireside, to help beguile the Winter evenings.
From the Republican and Argus, Baltimore.
It will add largely to Mrs. Moodie's already well-established fame.
From the Argus, Portland, Me.
Mrs. Moodie is a most delightful writer.
From the Blade, Toledo Ohio.
Her descriptions are immeasurably humorous. We have seen much of life in a new country, and can endorse her well-told stories.
From the Evening Journal, Albany.
She writes with wonderful ease, and her books are full of pleasant incidents.
From the Democratic Union, Harrisburg.
Those who desire to understand thoroughly the enjoyments and hardships of a backwoods' life should, by all means, read her productions.
All are unanimous in saying that "Life in the Clearings" is Mrs. Moodie's greatest effort.
Price in cloth, 75 cents; price in paper, 50 cents.

THE LOST HEIRESS.

Later from Santa Fé—Heavy Snows on the Route.

[Special Dispatch to the St. Louis Republican.]

INDEPENDENCE, Nov. 21, 1854.

The Santa Fe mail arrived at 3 o'clock this evening. There is no news of interest.

The trip from Santa Fé to Red River was a bad one; the party had to cut through snow-banks varying from seven to nine feet deep. The principal depth of snow between the above mentioned places was from 2½ to 3 feet. From Red River on this side the roads were tolerably good. The party encountered one snow-storm on the Jornada. Met no emigrants.

The Oneges and Cumanches were encamped on the Cimeront. They all seemed peaceable.

Saw any quantity of buffaloes from the crossing of the Big Arkansas to the Little Arkansas.

FALLING IN OF THE FERRY-STREET RAILROAD TUNNEL—SEVERAL PERSONS INJURED.—Quite an excitement was produced throughout the city about 11 o'clock yesterday morning, by the report that the tunnel of the Union Railroad, crossing Ferry-street, had caved in, burying several persons beneath, and killing certainly one or two. Happily the facts proved the first reports to be greatly exaggerated. It seems that for some time past the arch had been supported by props. Some twenty men were engaged yesterday forenoon in repairing the tunnel, making it more secure, and wholly removing a portion of it, for the purpose of rebuilding. While thus at work, the superstructure gave way, precipitating the men to the track below, and burying two or three in the rubbish. The people below discovered the arch giving way, and escaped unharmed. MICHAEL HOGAN, JERRY MURPHY, and PATRICK M'GRAW were the only persons injured. MURPHY was the most seriously injured of the three, and was immediately conveyed to the Hospital. It is feared he cannot survive. He was badly bruised about the head. M'GRAW and HOGAN, though maimed and bruised badly, were able to walk home. The accident prevented the 12 o'clock Hudson River Railroad train reaching the depôt. In the afternoon the rubbish had all been cleared, and the track left open for the trains.—Troy Whig.

MRS. BAKER ACQUITTED.—The case of Mrs. MARY C. W. BAKER, for the murder of WM. O. HOFFMAN, in this city, in May last, which has occupied the Court of Common Pleas for about a week past, went to the jury yesterday afternoon, after the close of the argument by Major WRIGHT and Mr. BLENNERHASSETT. Judge THEAT first instructed the jury, in a written address of considerable length, and which we heard spoken of as one of the most powerful and impartial documents of its kind ever rendered in our Courts. They were out near two hours, and returning at 4½ o'clock, announced a verdict of "Not Guilty." A large crowd, present at the time in the court-room, seemed generally to evince their approval of the result. The defendant herself exhibited a good deal of emotion at the reading of the verdict.

MR. PRESCOTT AND MR. SICKLES.

[Letter from Mr. Geo. Prescott concerning Mr. Sickles.]

LONDON, Nov. 13, 1854.

The United States' Secretary of Legation on the Court of St. James, Mr. D. E. SICKLES, of the Board intrusted to me, under date of the 4th and 18th of October, which I returned to him; the former for reasons stated in a letter dated the 20th ult., and the latter in a blank envelope.

He has published the correspondence here; and as his letters were evidently written more for the United States than for me, they will doubtless be made public in that country.

My conduct for appealing before the public, contrary to the advice of many kind friends, after receiving the letters as above stated, must be the official position of Mr. SICKLES, who dates these letters "United States' Legation, London," and seems permitted to use the word "Legation" with impunity, and in one or two instances the name of the American Minister, with equal freedom; thus giving an apparent sanction to his letters, which, as a friend and supporter of my country, I have, at home and abroad, I deeply lament, and am unwilling to believe authorized.

I will commence by stating that the letters of the United States' Secretary of Legation, dated the 4th, 18th, and introductory remarks of the 20th October, contain throughout accusations, innuendoes, and misrepresentations, so far as they are connected with my name, or are intended to impugn the integrity of my letter to the editor of the Boston Post, which, to the best of my knowledge and belief, have no truthful foundation. This paragraph will, I am sure, be a sufficient answer for my American friends; I will, however, take up separately portions of his remarks.

He says: "That I addressed an anonymous letter to the editor of the Boston Post, Mr. PRESCOTT never heard one." When a letter is published in a newspaper without a name, it becomes "anonymous." The public will give the Secretary of Legation full credit for the quibble. If the letter was not intended for publication, but written for the purpose of having its slanderous contents privately circulated, the act becomes still more disgraceful.

That part of the Secretary's letter dated the 7th of July, speaking of Englishmen being present, is unnoticed by his own of the 4th of October, when referring to an arrangement said to have been made with Mr. BOWDITCH; one completely contradicting the other.

The Secretary of Legation strives to make out the dinner a public one, as a justification of his extraordinary conduct at the table. He says, "You will remember that you dined the Legation to invite the Americans then in town, and not known to you, to be present on the occasion; and that a number of such invitations were given." I did not know; nor was a single invitation given except by myself. I said to Mr. BUCHANAN and his private Secretary, Mr. WELCH, when I have always said to the American Minister on similar occasions, namely, "If any Americans come to town, who are unknown to me; if you will send me their names, I shall be happy to invite them. If I have room."

In the Secretary's extraordinary remarks, he says, "The effort to represent the assumed National Entertainment, given on the 4th of July last, to the Americans in London, as a private dinner, is a perversion, an afterthought, now resorted to, for the purpose of escaping the "responsibility" so boldly avowed by Mr. PRESCOTT in his public letter to the Boston Post." The following copy of a letter, addressed to me by the Secretary the day after the dinner, is a sufficient reply to the above.

"No. 5 LANSDOWNE-PLACE, July 5, 1854.

"MY DEAR SIR: Another sheet of paper will be given, of which Mr. WELCH informed me this morning. I long now to present the name of ———, Esq., of New-York, an eminent lawyer and most estimable gentleman, who would, I know, duly appreciate the honor of an invitation to YOUR ENTERTAINMENT to-morrow. Mr. ——— is at No. 278 Strand. Permit me to inquire if you are acquainted with Mr. ——— of South Carolina, (at Long's,) and Mr. ——— of Spring Garden, who have lately come to London. These gentlemen, if our list do not be filled up, would, I am sure, be agreeable additions to YOUR COMPANY.

"Your friend and servant, G. M. DALLAS."

"P. S. Pardon the trouble I give you, my dear Sir, and, if you can, take charge of Cards for either of these gentlemen."

The Secretary of Legation speaks of Mr. SOMERBY's being requested to get up the Dinner. Mr. SOMERBY had nothing to do with getting up the Dinner. He is a gentleman highly esteemed for his integrity, intelligence, obliging disposition, and love of country. Having more leisure than myself he has kindly volunteered his services on several occasions, within three or four years, to aid me in procuring the names, preparing the cards, tickets, &c. On this occasion he undertook the same friendly office, and I am glad that he suggested to be now in London, to give such a decided contradiction to the principal statements of the United States' Secretary of Legation as the following letter contains:

Mr. SOMERBY presents his compliments to Mr. PRESCOTT, and begs to say that, his attention having first been called to the extraordinary character, issued from the United States' Legation in London, respecting Mr. PRESCOTT's course on the Fourth of July, and in which his (Mr. SOMERBY's) name is offensively as well as inaccurately introduced, he deems it incumbent on him to embrace the opportunity to reply thereto.

Mr. SOMERBY did not (as set forth by the United States Secretary of Legation at London) visit the Legation repeatedly to consult its members in reference to the arrangements of the dinner given by Mr. PRESCOTT on the 4th of July. At Mr. PRESCOTT's request, and with the aid of Mr. CORBIN, an American gentleman then residing in Paris, he prepared a series of notes, which he submitted to Mr. BUCHANAN, through the hands of his private Secretary. The substituting them for those of the Minister for the General, Mr. SOMERBY viewed as more in accordance with the wishes of Mr. PRESCOTT, whose desire it was to meet his guestings with all deference, than a necessity of gaining his assistance. Nevertheless, Mr. SOMERBY did suggest some prominent Americans might be in London, friends of the Legation, unknown to Mr. PRESCOTT, who would wished to share of the entertainment.

The proposals, after being submitted to His Excellency, were by his private Secretary, (who made a copy in his own handwriting,) returned to Mr. SOMERBY, with the verbal statement that it had the approval of the Minister; nor was the order derived from at the dinner. That no misunderstanding may occur, Mr. SOMERBY here states that the following is the order in which he received them from the American Minister, through the hands of his Secretary, viz.: "Take any words you please from the Gazette." "The Presidents of the United States." "Queen."

The reference to the music, as others was asked, was by Mr. SOMERBY well remembered having stated to some two of the Legation, that music would be song, portions of which would be omitted, inasmuch as the conflicting of good feeling on the day of celebrating our National Independence was an object not to be lost sight of.

Instead of representing difficulties in procuring the presence of Her Majesty and Prince ALBERT, Colonel LAWRENCE expressed the surprise that Her Majesty was not previously given; that he, on a more favorable occasion to Colonel PHIPPS; that intimation was to the effect that Mr. PRESCOTT would consider it a high compliment to his countrymen, if Her Majesty would grant to some one the determination of the only national song. Colonel LAWRENCE became the only person with whom the question to whom application was made in reference to these personns; nor did he write to Colonel PHIPPS in his official capacity.

That the objection to the presence of Englishmen at the other toasts were raised by the Secretary, Mr. SOMERBY wishes to be true; but he felt assured they were not in accordance Mr. PRESCOTT, whose course would be the greatest of the approval or disapproval of the Secretary of Legation, the American Minister having already expressed his assent thereto. Mr. SOMERBY would especially call attention to the two paragraphs here quoted:

"I must most earnestly with Mr. SOMERBY against the English tone that was to be given to an occasion which, above all others, ought to be American. I remember to urge upon you that it was in vain for Mr. PRESCOTT, or any one else, to attempt, to deny the assertions; that this was not an American idea; that the act of celebrating the 4th of July, 1776, was to keep alive for ever the hatred of tyranny and the love of liberty—all the questions of the conflict, in which the Revolution came into existence; and that, besides, many who were strangers than the politics that did part of Great Britain, very much commend the Treaty of Ghent. Let us remember, I request it as a personal favor, (I do not mean Mr. SOMERBY that it could not be expected that Mr. BUCHANAN, and the Minister of the Legation, would be by their presence, to lend countenance to a toast, or speaking that Americans, of all parties, would not be ready to join in."

Mr. SOMERBY did not "urge" the omission of the toasts, but he did urge the omission of the Queen, and the Minister of the Legation, the proposal of the Queen, and the Minister of the Legation, the proposal of the Queen, and the Minister of the Legation, the proposal
